Pavilion to be complete by Homecoming

by Joni Jones

Managing Editor

An attraction intended to unite the Northwest and Maryville communities is being added to campus.

The International Plaza, featuring the Boulevard of Nations, a water pavilion, the Friends Wall and World Clock are being constructed around Golden Pond.

The $400,000 project is being funded through donations.

Construction is scheduled to be finished by early October in time for Homecoming, said Jim Moore, director of development.

The International Plaza honors Northwest's multicultural population. The boulevard will run from College Avenue to the Student Union and be lined with flags from 48 countries. As the international population increases at Northwest, so will the number of flags, Moore said.

The water pavilion is an 800-square-foot, lighted facility which is intended to be used as a gathering place.

The pavilion is also a memorial to Karen Hawkins, a Northwest student murdered in 1995.

The landmark Kissing Bridge will also be incorporated into the pavilion.

The Friends of the Wall will display names of people who donate money to the project.

The World Clock, above the wall, will showcase clocks keeping the time of five different time zones, which have yet to be determined by the University.

Moore said this project is something everyone can enjoy and learn from.

"The lesson is we are not here alone," he said. "We live in a global society and we are all in it together."

Heat causes athletic rescheduling

by Mark Hornickel

Sports Editor

Last week, two high school athletes in Kansas collapsed and died following the first football practice of the season.

It was later determined the cause of the deaths was related to the heat wave that has recently struck the Midwest.

With several local sports teams beginning their practices, coaches and trainers are doing their best to take care of the athletes and help their bodies keep cool during the hottest parts of the day.

"Well, we all get cranky," Maryville head football coach Chuck Lliteras said. "We struggled through the second week, trying to keep them hydrated, so their performance levels would not go down."

The coaches have a rule that any time they notice a player who may need water, they allow him to have a drink.

"We let them have water pretty much any time they want," Lliteras said. "If they can leave a drill, get water and get back in the drill, we'll let them do that."

The players have scheduled water breaks, and Maryville High school volunteer trainer Brian Deardorff takes care of the players as well.

"On the real hot days, I have ice towels for them to flip over their heads," Deardorff said. "They can just soak and take their shoulder pads off for part of the practice."

The players have also been provided Gatorade during and after practices to keep from dehydrating.

This week at Maryville High School, in accordance with school policy, practices were postponed until 6 p.m. so the athletes could practice in conditions that were slightly cooler and safer for them.

Football wasn't the only sport to adjust schedules because of heat. Prior to this week, Maryville head cross country coach Ron Eckerson held his team's practices in the mornings. He said he makes sure that the runners' workouts include a place to stop for water.

"We're just making sure they can stop somewhere for water," Eckerson said. "Most of them have been running to the University so they can go into the Fine Arts Building or any of the other buildings on campus."

Deardorff said there have not been any substantial problems yet.

"It's about normal," he said. "You can tell the guys that didn't work as much over the summer. They're a little more out of shape."

If the athletes feel dizzy or start to get a headache, Deardorff and the coaches have instructed the players to let them know immediately.

"Depending on how dehydrated the players are, we'll have them get their pads off," Deardorff said. "The main thing is to get water into them and get all cooled off. If it gets any worse, ultimately, we'll get them to the hospital."

Democrat begins campaign

U.S. Representative helps Wheeler kick off state Senate campaign

by Toru Yamauchi

Senior Reporter

A local Democrat candidate running for state Senate kicked off her campaign with a congresswoman Wednesday.

Pat Danner, U.S. Representative, D-Mo., offered her support to Beth Wheeler, running for the 21st state Senate district, during an open house.

Danner, who is also up for reelection, was visiting Maryville for a town hall meeting.

Wheeler said her relationship with Danner should help her campaign against Republican incumbent Sam Graves.

"We have many of the same people whom we will be representing," Wheeler said. "I think it's another of those relationships that helps strengthen the influence and the power of northwest Missouri. We're very sparsely populated and those relationships and collaboration make us stronger."

Danner has known Wheeler for several years because she was state Senator when Wheeler served as a state representative from 1987 to 1992.

"I was on the other side of Capitol, so I did not work closely personally with Beth," Danner said. "But everything I ever heard about her is very, very positive, and I think she would make a fine public server."

Maryville Mayor Bridget Brown, candidate for State House of Representatives, also joined Wheeler at her campaign headquarters.

Brown, who is also challenging Republican incumbent Rex Barnett for the Nov. 3 election, said Wheeler is a beneficial running mate.

"It's kind of exciting to be able to work with one another," Brown said. "Beth has a long tenure as a representative, so she has certainly been a good adviser for me, so I can look to her for a lot of good information. She's been a big help for me. Hopefully I'm being a help to her, too."

Wheeler said she wants to make sure this district has a better education system, better economic development, better transportation and better safety.

"I believe it's something I can contribute to the people and to the district," Wheeler said.

"I believe that I am electable and will win because of the strong base of support that I have been building. I think that public service should have good people in it."

Wheeler resigned as vice president for community relations at Northwest in June. However, the decision was not one she had planned for a long time, she said.

Wheeler was asked to run for the Senate in 1994 and in March this year, but said she was not able to make a decision in both opportunities.

Incumbent Republican opens headquarters in Maryville to operate re-election campaign

by Scott Summers

Senior Reporter

State Senator Sam Graves was in Maryville Wednesday night to celebrate the opening of his campaign headquarters.

Graves said there were a number of reasons he decided to open his campaign headquarters in Maryville at 112 E. Third St.

"Maryville is the largest community in the district," Graves said. "I represented Maryville in the House and the last four years in the Senate. This is the last term I can serve in the Senate, so I thought this was a fitting place to be."

Jeff Roe, Graves' campaign manager, said Wednesday night's activities were important to the election bid.

"It shows people our presence in Nodaway County," Roe said. "Maryville is going to be the heart of our campaign. It's very important for the kickoff to gauge support and rally supporters."

Graves said one of his main goals, if he is elected to another term in fall, is to continue to fight for funding for education and roads in rural communities.

He said he has learned plenty from past campaigns that will help him this November.

"The important thing is to never take anything for granted," Graves said. "Pay attention to those people who have helped you out and supported you in the past and stand on your record."

Graves said he is very proud of the things he has accomplished in the past.

"I stand up for the individual," Graves said. "I'm not afraid to ruffle any feathers to get my point across."

Bob Rice, Northwest student and a member of Graves' campaign staff, said he has a lot of respect for what Graves does for the community.

"It takes a lot of hard work and guts," Rice said. "In my personal opinion, I don't want a yes man. I want somebody who will stand up to K.C. and St. Louis and say, 'We want our fair share.'"

My Turn

Missourian makes changes to inform, serve readers

Something is missing.

Every week the staff of the Northwest Missourian tries to provide you with the most up-to-date, comprehensive coverage of news and sports in the Maryville area.

But it often seems like something is lacking.

We have a tendency to forget our most important element — you.

A lot of the events you participate in haven't gotten much coverage.

A lot of the issues you are concerned about have gone by unnoticed.

So, we're doing something about it.

First, as a media outlet, the Missourian strives to report on the things you need to know about.

But without hearing from you, we don't know what those issues or events are.

So we are adding some new features to the Missourian.

We have always tried to keep the lines of communication between our readers and ourselves open; from letters to the editor and It's Your Turn to e-mail, phone calls and even faxes.

Our latest feature is Back Talk.

Next week we will have a direct line for our readers to leave their concerns and opinions anonymously.

You will also have access to Back Talk via our web site beginning next week.

Let us know if you have a complaint or compliment about Northwest or Maryville.

Your concerns will be printed in the newspaper and on the website. The Back Talk number is 562-1980, or access Back Talk on our website at <http://www.nwmissouri.edu/missourian>.

The online version of the Missourian is also changing. Starting Monday, we will have both daily and weekly versions online.

The Northwest Missourian Daily Online will briefly update news and sports stories Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday while Missourian Online will offer complete stories and additional features each Thursday and Friday.

Our third addition is an engagement, wedding and anniversary announcement page.

Send us your engagement, wedding and anniversary announcements and we will print them the first Thursday of each month.

Mail your announcements to The Northwest Missourian, 800 University Drive, Wells Hall 8, Maryville, Mo. 64468, or fax them to 562-1521.

We encourage you to take advantage of this special feature.

Although the Missourian is staffed by students who are also struggling with monster class loads, crammed schedules and a lack of time and money, we consider ourselves professionals.

As professionals, we are greatly concerned with our credibility.

The journalism profession has recently been faced with major setbacks regarding its ability to accurately and ethically report stories.

Locally, we have seen the effects in a column edited by Shane Whitaker at the Maryville Daily Forum last year.

Nationally, we can learn from the recent examples of The New Republic's former reporter Stephen Glass, who fabricated everything from telephone numbers to sources in his stories; The Boston Globe's former columnist Patricia Smith, a Pulitzer finalist, who admitted to inventing sources and quotes; the Cincinnati Enquirer's stolen e-mails regarding Chiquita's business practices; and CNN and Time magazine's false report that the military had used nerve gas to kill American defectors in Laos during the Vietnam War.

We are working to ensure situations like these never happen at the Missourian.

We have taken steps to maintain our credibility, including the addition of a copy assistant to fact check our stories.

We always strive to remain unbiased in all stories and report fairly and accurately.

If there is anything I can do for you, please let me know. I am always willing to listen to readers' suggestions and concerns. I can be reached at 562-1224 Monday through Friday.

As the editor in chief of the Missourian, I look forward to working with you and reporting on the issues and events you are interested in.

Keeping Northwest on track

Will Rogers said it first. University President Dean Hubbard repeated it last week: "Even if you are on the right track, you'll get run over if you just sit there."

Northwest is constantly moving and seeking improvement. But how do we determine what the right track is?

We have outlined seven recommendations for the school year. By continuing our journey on the right track, we can reap many benefits.

1. Orange fences

We are all tired of seeing them, but we look forward to the end results. We challenge the University and construction crews to stick to their time tables for their remodeling projects.

We also need to look at the quality of the work being done. The Administration Building was finished just last year and problems are already beginning to surface.

The plastic covers on many of the stairs are beginning to pull up or slip.

The Financial Aid office on the remodeled second floor was forced to deal with falling ceiling tiles prior to Advantage '98. Heavy condensation from the air conditioning system loosened the tiles and sent them to the floor.

If Northwest is going to continue trying to make improvements to our buildings, then we must remember the old adage to do the job right the first time. We don't have the time or money to fix mistakes that never should have been made.

Residence halls can be included in this list, too. The halls are in need of improvements and should be placed on the same priority list as academic buildings. Although South Complex is being worked on now, North Complex, Hudson and Perrin halls and all four high rises are in need of repairs.

Franken Hall residents are complaining of crumbling walls. A water main broke on the top floor of Millikan Hall before Advantage '98, sending water through the elevator shafts. Phillips Hall, although it is supposed to be air-conditioned, is only partially cooled. The air conditioning system has been in place in Phillips since it was built, but has never worked correctly. Hudson and Perrin halls and North Complex only have air conditioning in their lounges.

Early this morning a Hudson Hall resident had to be rushed to the hospital, but the elevator wasn't even big enough for the stretcher without adjusting it to an upright position.

All buildings should not only be handicap accessible, but accessible to emergency crews.

2. Student Senate

In her campaign for office last year, Student Senate President Angel McAdams said she wanted to increase communication with students.

We encourage Senate to take a proactive approach to government, as opposed to the reactive approach it has been criticized for in the past.

But this is not a one way road. Students must be willing to work with Senate in return.

3. Administration

We want to encourage our administration to be more approachable as well. Sometimes we wonder if they really know what students need. They can do all the surveys they want, but do they understand the students? We want to be more than a statistic.

Administration should more visible and willing to sit down and talk with students at random. Remember, not all student concerns are voiced through Senate. Northwest is a very diverse campus. Take time to listen to student's views.

4. Security

The addition of security lights in our parking lots and along the sidewalks are a welcome addition, but more can be done.

Many area colleges and universities have emergency telephones throughout campus to ensure students' safety. While the Campus Safety escort service is a good idea, few take advantage of it.

Student and faculty safety should be a No. 1 priority. Emergency telephones will provide a way to assure everyone's well-being.

5. Academics

In an institution that prides itself on excellence, equal recognition is often scarce. Athletic teams are very important to the University, but we need to give equal time to academics.

When was the last time you heard President Hubbard boast about the forensics team? Or Northwest student's CPA exams?

6. Parking

Over the summer the University paved many of the cowpaths Hubbard complained about early last year.

Why can't we pave a parking lot, too? With so many residents living in Hudson, Perrin and Roberta halls, half of the commuter parking lot behind Valk has been designated as resident parking. Where are the commuters supposed to park now?

A large number of our commuters and residence do not have a place to park. It's past time to take action on the parking issue.

7. The students

Students take time to complain among themselves, but they don't take time to do something about it.

Students, if you want to accomplish anything, you must be willing to work with those in authority. Take time to talk to group leaders, administrators and the Missourian staff. These groups initiate change and provide a voice to address issues important to you.

We challenge the administration and students to consider these recommendations. The only thing that keeps us on the right track is listening to the most important people on campus — the students. This only happens if we take the time to not only hear, but listen to what is said.

It's Your Turn

Which University project deserves the most attention?

"I think the Union. It gets used the most."
Leticia Richardson, business major

"I think they should focus on the Union so stuff isn't spread all over."
Matt Opbroek, undecided major

"The Union needs to be finished. The food service is a mess."
Drew Comes, farm operations major

"They should get the Union repaired quickly, because it's packed, and it doesn't make sense to have eating places scattered across campus."
Todd Heins, business management major

"The food courts, 'cause it's too expensive and not enough places to eat."
Christian Kincheloe, elementary education major

"(They need) to finish something before they start three other things. Especially the Union."
Les Clark, history major

Convocation new to campus

by Scott Summers
Senior Reporter

Northwest is trying to make the jump from high school to college easier for incoming freshmen.

With that in mind, the University's first student convocation took place Sunday.

Northwest President Dean Hubbard told freshmen the University's main focus is on quality, but it is up to the students to make a difference.

"It takes two hands to clap," Hubbard said. "And you have to clap along with us to make this work."

Kent Porterfield, vice president for Student Affairs, said the convocation should have shown students exactly what is needed to be successful in their college years.

"It's a nice way to kick off the year for new students," Porterfield said. "In particular, I think it helps to give them some sense of what's expected."

Angel McAdams, Student Senate president, focused her speech to freshmen on where some of Northwest's graduates are now.

She remembers what it was like to be a freshman. "What really impressed me was how much pride and love this campus and community had," McAdams said.

The hour-long convocation offered freshmen students one final piece of motivation before they began the new year.

"I think it's fair to say that faculty and staff make a serious commitment to students, and we want students to make that same commitment," Porterfield said. "I think this is an opportunity for them to really see that it's a fun experience, but at the same time there is a little bit of work to be done."

McAdams said the program got the message across to new students.

She hopes the convocation will become a tradition at Northwest.

"I think it went very well," she said. "It was awesome. I wish we would have had something like this when I was a freshman."

Freshman Tony Saccoman, accounting major, said the presentation was very informative.

"I learned to stay away from the party scene," Saccoman said. "Go ahead and have fun, but remember why you're here."

Judge rules in harassment case

Simonson found guilty

by Jacob DiPietre
Special Assignment Reporter

Sexual harassment allegations, filed against Michael Simonson at Iowa State, were confirmed by an administrative law judge in late June.

Simonson was approved by the Northwest Board of Regents to be director of the Center for the Application of Instructional Technology to Learning in March. He withdrew from the position after the allegations were covered by the Missourian in April.

Judge Donald Bolhken found Simonson, a tenured professor of curriculum and instruction at Iowa State, had engaged in behavior that constituted quid pro quo sexual harassment, sexual abuse, creating a sexually hostile workplace and educational environment, and intentionally misrepresented himself to superiors.

Quid pro quo sexual harassment means Simonson offered to change a student's grade or help her out financially in exchange for sex.

CeCe Wagner, Iowa State's attorney, said in the case of intentional misrepresentation, Simonson deliberately lied to his superiors at Iowa State in order to hinder the investigation.

"All of the violations of sexual harassment prohibitions, taken together, constitute proof...of a pattern of sexual harassment by Simonson," Bolhken wrote. "There are reasonable grounds to believe that the charges against Simonson are true and support the proposed action of terminating his employment."

Simonson and his attorney Stephen Terrill are appealing the decision, and did not return phone calls for comment.

However, soon after the judge gave his ruling, Simonson spoke out about his possible job at Northwest.

According to the July 2 issue of the Iowa State Daily, Simonson said he wants to stay at Iowa State and is "not interested in a job" at Northwest.

"I'm still working with them (Northwest) to find candidates for that job, but I'm not interested in the position and I never really was," Simonson was quoted as saying in the Daily.

Provost Tim Gilmour had no comment.

- February 1998 - Northwest Board of Regents approved the appointment of Michael Simonson as CAITL director.
- April 1998 - Allegations of sexual harassment against Simonson at Iowa State University are uncovered by the Northwest Missourian. Simonson's appointment at Northwest is reversed.
- University President Dean Hubbard and Provost Tim Gilmour address questions about Simonson's hearing in the Missourian.
- May 1998 - Simonson withdraws from the CAITL position.
- June 1998 - Judge Donald Bolhken finds Simonson had engaged in behavior that constituted quid pro quo sexual harassment, sexual abuse, created a sexually hostile workplace and educational environment and intentionally misrepresenting himself to superiors.

CAITL undergoes setbacks, moves on

by Jacob DiPietre
Special Assignments Reporter

While the departure of Michael Simonson as CAITL director may have been a minor set back, the University is moving on.

Roger Von Holzen, interim CAITL director, said things are not moving as fast as he had hoped, but there is a plus side to the situation.

"One benefit of the delay is the fact that we've had more money made available for hardware and software," Von Holzen said. "I don't know what we would have done without it."

Taylor Barnes, dean of the College of Arts and Science, said the committee started a new search over the summer and received around 30 applications. He said they have the list narrowed down to 10 and are checking references.

While the University looks for a new director Von Holzen said he is happy he has the opportunity to work as CAITL director on an interim basis.

"It gives me a chance to find out if I want it before I have to take it," Von Holzen said. "It is an opportunity for me."

Clinton scandal hits home

■ Northwest students, faculty discuss actions, future of nation's leader

by Lindsey Corey
News Editor

It has been a colorful summer with the now infamous blue cocktail dress, $100 gold tie and, of course, the White House. And now, the threat of impeachment.

President Bill Clinton has been seen in a new light in recent months as the Monica Lewinsky case resulted in him becoming the first president to testify before a grand jury.

Northwest political science professors and students have closely monitored Clinton's actions up until his address to the nation last Monday when he confessed to having a relationship with Lewinsky that was "not appropriate," but not exactly sexual.

"I thought he was trying to simply say as little as was possibly necessary considering there were seven months of silence and then they had physical evidence," said Richard Fulton, political science professor.

Although an Aug. 31 Newsweek report said 57 percent of Americans believe Clinton said enough about his relations with Lewinsky in his speech, most department members

"Clinton is an intelligent man who behaved stupidly. Men have what I call the 'male disease.' They think they can have their cake and eat it too, but there is always a consequence. He hurt his family and the nation and diminished the integrity of the presidency."

■ David McLaughlin, associate professor of political science agreed with Fulton that the statement should have come prior to his testimony and that Clinton left basic information.

"He should have given it a lot sooner, because he seemed mad at the world and like he had to be there," Mindy White, political science major, said. "He never took blame and didn't seem sorry."

Fifty-nine percent of those interviewed in the Newsweek poll said Clinton should have used the words "I'm sorry."

Robert Dewhirst, political science professor, said he was surprised at how combative Clinton was toward Starr. He had expected him to be "more apologetic."

Angel Harris-Lewis, recent Northwest political science graduate, said the speech did little more than "signify that he wasn't honest initially" and that, she said, sets a bad example.

"You're taught to admit when you're wrong at an early age,"

Harris-Lewis said. "It sends a bad message for a leader of a nation to not take responsibility sooner."

Public opinion polls have consistently given Clinton high ratings. Despite problems in his personal life, he has experienced approval for many of his political moves and ideas.

"Clinton is an intelligent man who behaved stupidly," said David McLaughlin, associate professor of political science. "Men have what I call the 'male disease.' They think they can have their cake and eat it too, but there is always a consequence. He hurt his family and the nation and diminished the integrity of the presidency."

Pat Danner, U.S. Representative, D-Mo., said a prescription for the "disease" and its side effects will be difficult to fill.

"It's going to be impossible for the president to call members of Congress now and say you've got to do this for the presidency," Danner said. "When someone has told you something in January and then completely reverses what he said a few months later, it causes one to have some fear and questions about his truthfulness."

Others are foreseeing that Clinton will get little respect from colleagues and will face new challenges in getting things accomplished.

"He can't regroup," said Kevin Buterbaugh, political science professor. "He has lost the support of his party and Congress. Without that you can't be a successful president. As far as domestic issues, he's toast."

Many fear it could be worse. Clinton faces possible impeachment hearings if perjury is proven. Buterbaugh said although he is concerned with Clinton's ability to govern well, he would be "ashamed if he is impeached over an affair like this."

Fulton agreed impeachment is not likely in a situation of alleged adultery, but said "if he were an honorable man, he'd resign."

Dewhirst said impeachment is "always possible" since the Constitution is vague.

"It's all politics and there is no separation between private and political," he said. "The Republicans will do a cost-benefit analysis and base their decision on that."

President Bill Clinton addressed the nation after testifying before a grand jury last week in the Monica Lewinsky case. Several Northwest students and professors felt Clinton should have apologized to the nation.

■ An overview of what happened in Maryville while you were gone

Memorial fund honors Northwest student

Christine A. Galitz, 22, Maryville, died June 9 in a car accident north of Maryville. She graduated from Northwest in May and was the editor in chief of Heartland View magazine.

Heartland View, a four-state travel and leisure magazine, was to discontinue publication due to lack of circulation and advertising to support its expenses. The magazine was to become an online publication.

According to the summer 1998 edition of Heartland View, Josten's Printing Company made it possible for the magazine to continue its printed version for another year.

A scholarship has also been started in Galitz's name and will be awarded for the first time during the spring semester. Donations can be sent to: Laura Widmer, 236 Wells Hall, Maryville, Mo. 64468.

Make checks payable to the Northwest Missouri Foundation and indicate in a memo the donation is for the Christine Galitz Memorial Scholarship.

Maryville accepting director applications

Matt Chesnut became Maryville's interim director of public works and assistant city manager after former director Ron Brohammer resigned earlier this month.

Chesnut was appointed to the temporary position by City Manager David Angerer. Brohammer left to work as city manager for Richmond.

Applications to fill the position are due Friday. A director will be selected after résumé reviews and interviews.

Chesnut, one of the applicants for the new position, will work as the interim director until director is appointed.

Computer technology, home page enhanced

■ New server increases weekend access to net

by Toru Yamauchi
Senior Reporter

Several improvements were made to Northwest's computer system over the summer break.

Users now have more access hours to the World Wide Web because of the addition of a specialized server for allocating Internet protocol addresses to individual PCs, said Jon Rickman, director of computing services.

However, access to the VAX after 5 p.m. Friday until early Saturday morning will still be unavailable, Rickman said.

Another improvement involves the access speed to the Internet.

Two telephone lines were added, making access three times faster than before, he said.

Students' usernames on the VAX were changed to comply with the future version of the computing system.

To help students adjust to the new system, academic computing services is offering short-courses to assist them.

Northwest changed the structure and design of its home page as well last week, aiming at becoming more user-friendly.

This is the first change Dennis Esser, coordinator of publications, has made since he was hired nine months ago to improve the University web site.

He said there are visible design changes, but the most important change is in the organization of the home page and how to navigate users from one page to another.

Although the home page is far

Changes made to the electronic campus

■ Access to the World Wide Web on Friday after 5 p.m. is available

■ Access to World Wide Web is now three times faster

■ VAX usernames and passwords changed

To get your new username, log in with your old username and go to PC Password in your "STAR" account. Instruction to set a new password are available at <http://www.nwmissouri.edu/comperv/password.htm>.

■ New computer labs were created in Garrett-Strong and the Fine Arts Building

■ 107 new notebook computers were given to faculty

■ Microsoft Access software is on the computers on the first floor of the library

from the perfect level, Esser is satisfied with the accomplishments, he said.

This is a part of ongoing improvement, he said. Although, the Northwest home page is almost entirely maintained by the Public Relations office, Esser wants to divide it into sections by department, because it is a time consuming job for the office, he said.

Northwest's web address is <http://www.nwmissouri.edu>.

Professor turns advertising into art

Art department plans to develop student-run advertising agency

by Toru Yamauchi
Senior Reporter

A newly hired art professor is not afraid to create an unprecedented study environment, along with a new computer lab in the Fine Arts Building.

Craig Warner, associate professor of art-graphic design, is planning to develop a student-run advertising agency.

The agency's members will be selected from students who have the best skills in areas necessary for the agency such as art, computers, graphic design, photography, writing and business, Warner said.

Examples of what the agency could do would make a logo for camping equipment, designing a box for soap and creating a home page for organizations such as the art department, he said.

Kim Spradling, art department chairman, said he agrees with Warner's idea of an ad agency because students can have "real life experience."

The agency would probably not receive any funding from the University, because it's going to be independent, Warner said.

Warner was the adviser of an 11-student advertising agency at Southwest Minnesota State. He said four members quit school and created an independent advertising agency.

"The president of the university was really upset with me, saying 'Those four students quit school, and you let them do it,'" Warner said. "(But) that's why you're here at school — to learn how to have an enjoyable career. That's what I did. I did my job."

Warner said he was pleased to come to Northwest because of the new computer lab used for graphic design and the art department's desire to move toward new media.

The newly established lab contains 17 personal computers aimed for artistic purposes primarily in five areas: type of graphic layout, drawing and illustration, image manipulation, interactive graphics like CDs and web pages, and motion, such as computer animation, Warner said.

By using these computers, a student will be able to complete graphic work that used to require several people and places, he said.

"This is something rather unique," Warner said. "It's an artistic endeavor using latest technology."

The new computer lab caused the closing of metalsmithing and jewelry classes and focuses on new media, Warner said.

Jennifer Meyer/Photography Director

Dr. Craig Warner works with one of the new computers that will soon be used by students who are interested in working for a student run advertising agency. Dr. Warner is looking for students with interest and experience in graphic design, photography, art, computers, writing and business.

Cabin Candles offers a variety of candles, incense and other items to help spruce up where ever you call home.

New candle business lights up community

by Stephanie Zellstra
Managing Editor

Candles used to be a necessity to see throughout the house. Now candles fill homes with scents of sugar and spice, sunset and melon.

Cabin Candles, which opened June 15, has had steady business since then. Owner Anne Snow attributes business to the growing popularity of candles.

"There used to be just a few fragrances available, but now there are so many seasonal candles," Snow said. "Candles are so popular because I think people are realizing that they can really finish a room off."

Although Snow has always liked candles and thought a candle store would do well, she said; her husband didn't agree.

"My husband was supportive of me, but didn't think there would be a market for a specialty store with candles," Snow said. "He has been really surprised with the amount of business I get. He just can't believe that women spend that much on candles."

Snow found out it hasn't been only women buying candles. She said men will come into the store and smell them right along with the women, because there is such a variety of fragrances available today.

Candles also make good gifts, as Snow has discovered. Many people will buy them for weddings, birthdays and other occasions.

Cabin Candles has a large selection of candles and other home decorating items, such as pictures, handmade pottery, odor eating candles and incense. Prices range from $1.20 votive candles to around $20 for pillar candles.

Snow has enjoyed the store so far, has been well received and is glad she made the decision to open the business.

Tips from Cabin Candles

- You don't save money by buying less expensive candles. They usually don't last as long and their fragrance isn't as strong.
- Always trim the wick before and after you burn the candle.
- Smell the bottom of the candle when you buy it to test how strong the fragrance is.

Communication remains fuzzy with cable company

by Scott Summers
Senior Reporter

Negotiations between the city of Maryville and Classic Cable might be moving to the next level.

Since January 1996, Maryville has been attempting to make a deal with Classic Cable to develop specifications for a new cable system.

City Manager David Angerer said negotiations have been conducted on an informal basis between the two sides, but no deal has been reached.

"The city has decided to up the ante by going into formal negotiations as outlined by the Federal Communications Commission."

"Over the summer, they've gotten a little closer, but not close enough," Angerer said.

The city's ultimate goal of its negotiations with Classic Cable is to receive better pictures, better sound and more reliable system.

The city also wants Classic

In a letter to Mayor Bridget Brown, dated Aug. 12, 1998, Classic Cable announced its basic service rates would increase by 50 cents per month starting in October. Currently cable costs $30.45 per month.

Cable to provide Internet service, data transmission, telephone and other services via customers' television sets.

Gil Nichols, vice president of operations for Classic Cable, views things a bit differently than Angerer.

"I think we're all pretty much on the same page," Nichols said. "The process is nearing completion."

Angerer said the city will continue to negotiate informally with Classic Cable, hoping the formal negotiations will make the company more flexible.

Angerer said two other results could come from the formal negotiation process.

"The FCC will help us get what we want from them, or as a possible result of the formal process, they would be ousted as the city's cable provider," Angerer said.

Nichols said Classic Cable has offered the city quite a bit already.

"We've offered to upgrade to a state-of-the-art system with the capabilities of 78 channels," Nichols said.

Angerer said the company understands what it is doing and knows what the city wants, but is playing games with Maryville.

"The problem that I have with Classic is that they can talk a pretty good story, but their formal proposal to us lacks detail," Angerer said.

Angerer said he thought the two sides had reached an agreement earlier this summer, but was disappointed when Classic Cable's contract to them was not specific enough.

Streets undergo major improvements

by Scott Summers
Senior Reporter

Both Northwest students and Maryville residents should have a smoother ride, thanks to recent street improvements.

Matt Chesnut, interim director of public works and assistant city manager, said all of the street projects are either finished or near completion.

One of the city's main goals this summer was getting its asphalt overlay projects done.

The largest of the asphalt overlay projects was on Walnut Street. Prather Avenue, Sunset Drive, East Jenkins Street and the intersection of Lincoln and Main streets also received attention from the Maryville Public Works Department. The contract price of the asphalt overlay project was $139,129.

Street Superintendent Jay Cacek said he has been relatively pleased with the work and the speed with which the projects are being completed.

Construction of concrete gutters and curbs on East Thompson Street are part of Maryville's permanent street project. The contract price of the project is $517,508.

Rain over the summer months has delayed work on North College Drive, which is supposed to cost the city $183,057, Chesnut said.

The project to completely replace the roadway was to take between six and eight weeks to complete, but is currently in its 12th week. Although the road is now open, there is still some minor work to be done.

"We're trying to beat the rate of the college students coming in," Cacek said. "If the weather would have been OK, we would have been done and out of there."

Cacek said the street department has been very busy trying to finish some of the larger projects, and now needs to take care of the little things.

"We want to get back to maintenance a little bit," Cacek said. "We kind of left that to get the bigger projects done, and we need to start patching some holes we have around town and doing some ditch-work."

Collection line to be implemented at landfill

The system is designed to prevent unwanted minerals from surfacing to groundlevel. It will also separate them from the groundwater.

The issue was voted on and passed at the Maryville City Council meeting Monday.

City Manager David Angerer said the installation of the system will prolong the life of the landfill by five years or more.

'Cats set sights high

■ Team hopes to beat Pittsburg State, rule MIAA

by Colin McDonough
Contributing Writer

Florence or Bust. That's what the T-shirts say and anything less will be deemed a failure to the Bearcat football team.

Four seasons ago, the Bearcats were relegated to the basement of the MIAA, but they now sit atop the league reigning as kings. However, some team members think they are not receiving the royal treatment from other league coaches.

The preseason coaches' poll lists the 'Cats in the second position behind perennial power Pittsburg State, but many of the players said it is actually a blessing in disguise.

"I didn't think we had anything left to prove, but somebody's not giving us respect," said Adam Horn, junior defensive end. "It's definitely a motivating factor."

Steve Coppinger, senior center and one of four team captains, said it gives the Bearcats a chance to prove everybody wrong again.

"It's the way we want it," Coppinger said. "You see that and you think that people don't think we've proven ourselves. It gives us motivation because if they downgrade you then you show them where we are supposed to be."

Head coach Mel Tjeerdsma said the offense will be led by Harlon Hill, the award given to the best Division II football player, and all-America candidate senior quarterback Chris Greisen.

Greisen passed for over 2,400 yards and 23 touchdowns last season, while only throwing 7 interceptions.

Greisen said he will not get caught up in the Harlon Hill hype because there are other promising players on the team.

"Don't get me wrong, it would be a great honor, but as is any award, it's a team award and you can't earn it without a great supporting cast," Greisen said.

While statistics show Greisen leads the offense and lights up the scoreboard, the defense would like to keep the opponents' scoring lights dim.

"We want to pitch some shutouts this season," said Aaron Becker, junior defensive tackle. "Our offense is going to put some points on the board and we haven't had a shutout in my two years here, so it's about time that we have a shutout. Our front seven is as good as it has been in the past few years and our secondary is going to be tough to pass on."

Coach Mel Tjeerdsma and the Bearcats will take the field for the first home game of the 1998 football season Sept. 5 when they welcome Midwest Texas State. The 'Cats were 12-1 on the season last year and are looking for another shot at the national title.

The Northwest women's soccer club is back for another season after finishing with a winning record of 4-3-1 last year.

Head coach Greg Roper said he has high expectations for this year's team. Ten players are returning and 10 others are joining the team.

"Not only do we return with the core from last year's team intact, we've added a significant crop of players, both incoming freshman and on-campus talent, who heard about the program, got excited, and want to be a part of it," Roper said.

The returning striker is senior Andrea Sacco; returning midfielders are sophomore Melissa Cole and seniors Natalie Shepard, Kelli Coffee and Jerusha Sluss; returning defenders are seniors Katie

Adams and Monica Kepler; the returning goalkeeper is senior Danielle Saunders.

Midfielder Simon will add strength to the team, while Hayes and Smith will challenge for a starting position Roper said.

Boswell may give Saunders a run at goalkeeper along with Leach, Roper said. Roper said he looks forward to battling clubs from Kansas University and Kansas State.

The club will begin its season Aug. 29 at 1 p.m. against St. Mary's College of Leavenworth, Kan.

Roper is excited about the season and believes the program is headed in the right direction.

"The east bank is a great shaded place to watch a sports event," Roper said. "We're hoping new freshmen and returning students will want to come out and support Northwest's newest sport."

Squad looks to improve showing

The Bearcat volleyball team hopes to improve on last year's 8th place finish according to head coach Sarah Pelster.

■ Tournaments, regional action start season off right

by Colin McDonough
Contributing Writer

After posting a winning record last year, the Bearcat volleyball team is looking for an improvement in its MIAA showing, according to head coach Sarah Pelster.

Even with a 21-18 mark, last year's record was overshadowed by a 3-13 league mark, which earned an 8th place team finish. However, this year looks to be different Pelster said.

"We're going to improve on that because of the experience we gained last year from playing five freshmen," Pelster said. "With the game experience along with the offseason workouts we're going to be a viable contender."

Pelster said the team's attack will be led by a young crew of athletes. Without a senior on the squad the Bearcats will look to underclassmen to take charge, she said.

"With last year and this year I think we've had the best recruiting classes I've ever had," Pelster said. "Our future is bright and it's only going to get better in the next two to three years."

Sophomore middle hitter Abby Sunderman is a part of the young nucleus and led the 'Cats last year in hitting and was second in blocking, Pelster said.

Sunderman said even with the young roster, this year should be exciting.

"We're going to do a lot better because we are used to playing together now," Sunderman said. "We know what to look for in each other on the court. Hopefully we can build from that and make it a better season."

The Bearcats open their season Sept. 4-5 at the University of Alabama-Huntsville Tournament. Pelster said the team can't wait to get going.

"We are very excited to go down there and get the season started," Pelster said.

"We've found it to be a real good tournament and it's a regional tournament. So we get to play some regional teams to strengthen our schedule."

The MIAA shapes up to be a race to catch Central Missouri Jennies. Central has won all 16 league titles and has never lost more than two matches in a season since the inception of volleyball in 1982.

"(Central) has got a mental edge and for someone to beat them you've got to overcome that mental aspect," Pelster said.

Pelster also said Emporia State and Missouri Western should give the Jennies a run for their money in league play, but Central is the class of the MIAA.

Young team hopes for another championship

by Wendy Broker

After standing atop the mountain of the MIAA conference and edging toward the peak nationally, the Northwest cross country teams will try to keep the tradition of recent years alive.

The women's team has won the MIAA championship for the last three years.

Team captain Lindsey Borgstadt, along with fellow senior Amber Martin, will offer leadership and experience to the team, which is looking to live up to its No. 1 pre-season ranking, head coach Vicki Wooton said.

"It puts pressure on the team," Borgstadt said. "When you're on top it's hard to stay there — everyone's looking to knock you down. But if we work hard, we can win again. It'll be tough, but we have a lot of talent and I know we can do it."

Despite the relatively young roster, Wooton said goals for the team remain high.

"Ultimately, we want to win conference, place in the top two at regionals, be in the top three at all meets and have everyone finish the season healthy," Wooton said.

"We need to have some individuals step up and take the place of those that are gone. Although we are young and new, we have the capability if we work hard as a team."

Wooton said the women are looking good in practice and are looking ahead to their first meet, the Bearcat Distance Classic on Sept. 5 at Northwest.

The men's team will be striving to better last year's second place conference finish, head coach Rich Alsop said.

The men have been on the road to improvement in recent seasons, which will remain a priority, Alsop said.

"We're going to try to start out tougher than last year and hold it throughout the season, and try to make a run at Central (Missouri State)," Alsop said. "It's time for us to go for it. I think we have the start of a good season, and we're excited to get going."

The team, ranked No. 2 in the preseason poll, will be led by seniors Robby Lane, Brian Cornelius, and Don Ferree. All three have been major players in the team's success.

The men are putting in about 60 miles a week to prepare for the Bearcat Classic.

Coach moved out of intensive care

by Mark Hornickel

Northwest's men's and women's head tennis coach Mark Rosewell underwent successful open-heart surgery last Thursday.

Rosewell suffered a minor heart attack on Aug. 17 while in Kansas City. He was admitted to North Kansas City Hospital, where he underwent testing and later a quintuple bypass operation.

The surgery was successful, Rosewell said. He was moved out of intensive care last Friday.

"Things seem to have gone OK," Rosewell said from his room at the hospital. "I'd just like to thank everyone for their prayers, thoughts, cards and things. I'm looking forward to getting back to Northwest and winning another championship."

Northwest Athletic Director James Redd said the entire Maryville community, faculty and staff at Northwest and many of Rosewell's friends shared concern for the Bearcat coach.

"We're really happy to hear that Mark is doing better," Redd said. "Mark is a big part of our athletics department and our community and we look forward to having him back just as soon as he is able."

Rosewell will have to go through rehabilitation, before he can return to coaching. Until then, graduate assistant Brian Surface will be heading the tennis team. Several other graduate assistants and former players will help out as well.

Rosewell was the 1998 Regional Women's Coach of the Year. He swept the MIAA men's and women's coach of the year honors in 1997.

Alumnus ends stint with Chiefs after being cut

by Mark Hornickel
Sports Editor

A former Bearcat's NFL hopes were cut short Tuesday.

Jesse Haynes, former Northwest running back, was one of 22 players cut from the Kansas City Chiefs roster in order to get it down to the NFL-mandated limit of 60.

Haynes spent last season with the Chiefs practice squad and gained a great deal of publicity as an up-and-coming running back during the offseason.

Haynes gained just 26 yards on 11 carries and never made it to the endzone. The number that stands out on his stat sheet is three fumbles.

Haynes former coach and current Northwest head football coach Mel Tjeerdsma said Haynes has the ability to do well, but the fumbles were costly.

"His effort probably just wasn't enough," Tjeerdsma said. "I think he was probably trying too hard and that maybe caused him to fumble the ball. He showed the same running abilities he had when he was here. It's just too much when you fumble the ball like he did."

As a senior at Northwest, Haynes dominated the Bearcats running game, helping the team to a record of 11-2 and the second round of the NCAA Division

II playoffs during the 1996 season. He set school records with 1,830 yards rushing and 20 touchdowns in a season.

Tjeerdsma said he had not spoken to Haynes, but he would advise him to try and continue his football career.

"I don't think he's ready to give up," Tjeerdsma said. "Hopefully he'll try to get on with another team or the practice squad for another year. I'd certainly encourage him to do that. It's probably not been a good experience for him, but hopefully he'll just go out and try to do what he does naturally."

Haynes was not available for comment.

'Hounds football team hopes to avenge title

by Mark Hornickel
Sports Editor

The Spoofhounds football team has begun its road to avenging an early exit from the play-offs last year.

"We've got a very close football team," head coach Chuck Lliteras said. "As always, our expectations are very high. This team wants to be successful. They want to win conference, win district and have a good shot at winning the 3A state championship."

Despite the loss of some key players from last year's roster, the Hounds will benefit from several returning players with varsity experience, including seniors Adam Otte, John Edmonds, Mike Nanniga and Chris Shieber, Lliteras said.

All together, the 'Hounds are built around a nucleus of 12 seniors.

Senior Nick Glasnap and junior Pat Jordan are the top two candidates for the quarterback position.

"Both are outstanding students and have good athleticism," Lliteras said.

Lliteras is also confident that new members like junior Justin DeShon, senior Adam Jones, junior Heath Reynolds and senior Joshua O'Donnell will be an asset to the 'Hounds this season.

"It's been our good fortune through the years to have a good feeder program," Lliteras said. "The kids grow and develop through the system starting in seventh grade. By the time they get to be juniors and seniors, they're developed and ready to play."

The 'Hounds will be playing in an expanded version of the Midland Empire Conference this year with the additions of Platte County, Cameron and Smithville.

"All have the ability to be very difficult opponents," Lliteras said. "One of the things year in and year out in the Midland Empire Conference is the quality of football we play. So it's going to be a really tough schedule this year."

Lliteras said the number one thing on the 'Hounds' mind going into the new season is to gain control of the ball and reduce the number of times it is on the ground.

"We'll still have a very explosive offense and a very explosive defense," Lliteras said.

Lliteras said it is critical that the younger players mature quickly in order to add depth to the team and help avoid injuries.

"Expectations are way up," Lliteras said. "And if they weren't I'd be very disappointed."

Fighting for the starting position, 'Hound quarterback senior Nick Glasnap, spots a receiver over the middle of the field in Saturday's scrimmage. The 'Hounds will open their season at 7 p.m. Sept. 4 at Smithville. The team is beginning its quest for a chance at the state 3A title after being knocked out of contention by Platte County last November.

Cross country looks toward season

Boys, girls have high expectations for season, look to overcome losses

by Mark Hornickel
Sports Editor

The Maryville harriers are running with high expectations as they begin a new season, according to the team's head coach. "I think we have a good possibility for a couple of guys and a couple of girls to qualify for state," head coach Ron Eckerson said.

Last year, graduate Courtney Conley was the 'Hounds' lone representative at the state competition.

Graduate Brian Jewell just missed a chance at running in the state meet.

Eckerson believes the team will overcome the losses of Conley and Jewell.

A newcomer to the team, junior Melissa Myers, could make a big impact on the team, Eckerson said.

Myers decided to give cross country a try after playing volleyball for the past two years. She runs track during the spring sports season.

Making a run again for the state meet will be senior Jason Felton.

Felton almost missed the state meet last year, finishing at districts with a time of 19:20.

Eckerson believes two sophomores, Jennifer Heller and Justin Nickerson, have a good shot at competing at the state level.

The 'Hounds will gain a wealth of leadership from the team's returning seniors — Laura Loch, Dustin Coulter, Nate Harris and Felton, Eckerson said.

Two freshmen, Ryan Douglas and Malorie Jones, also will be key additions to the squad, Eckerson said.

The Spoofhound volleyball team will take the court for its first match Sept. 1 at Rock Port with hopes of regaining another Midland Empire conference championship.

Past provides solid base for MHS spikers

by Travis Dimmitt
Missourian staff

The Maryville volleyball team is approaching the season with much to build on from last year's successful campaign.

The 1997 Spoofhounds finished the season with a 24-4-1 record, which earned them a share of the Midland Empire Conference championship.

Head coach Greg Winslow expects to build on that success, but said his team will still need to work hard to improve.

"I expect us to be pretty good," Winslow said. "We have a lot of talent. A lot of junior varsity players moved up this year, but we are fairly young. It concerns me a little bit."

Another concern for Winslow is the loss of the two cornerstones of his 1997 squad, Abby Lane and Cynthia Prokes. Both graduated in May. Winslow expects veterans to step up and fill the void.

Seniors Stephanie Duncan and Karl Lohaefer will likely inherit key leadership roles for the 'Hounds, Winslow said.

Contributions may come from the younger players as well, he said.

"I do have some sophomores that may be able to step up to the varsity level and help a little bit," Winslow said. "Dana Lade made great strides last summer. Nicole Scieffer will probably step in as a middle blocker, middlehitter or possibly an outside hitter. She's got some size and pretty good skills."

Winslow has confidence the 'Hounds will start the year out right and possibly be a leg up in seasons to come.

"I'm excited about the season, not only this year, but for the possibility of the next two or three years," Winslow said. "We've got a lot of good athletes out there."

Maryville girls tennis welcomes new members, looks to improve record

by Blake Drehle
Missourian Staff

The Spoofhound girls' tennis team is set to begin another season. Twenty five girls make up this year's team, which is looking to improve.

After finishing with a 5-4 record last year. Head coach P.K. Krokstrom said he is ready to start the season.

"There are several standout players on this year's team that are looking to have a good year," Krokstrom said. "This should be a real good team."

The addition several freshmen who are ready to learn also helps out the team's chances, Krokstrom said.

Krokstrom enjoys the fact that there are a lot of players out and wants everybody to have fun.

"My philosophy is that everybody plays and tries to have fun," he said. "With that attitude the team should do fine."

The toughest competition on the schedule will come from Savannah and Chillicothe. Those two teams are always tough and are strong in straights and doubles, Krokstrom said.

The 'Hounds' season begins at 4 p.m. Sept. 3, at home against Lafayette. Savannah will come to town Sept. 8. The 'Hounds will face Chillicothe Sept. 29.

The Maryville High School girls tennis team will return to the courts hoping to improve upon last year's record beginning with their match against Lafayette Sept. 3.

'Hounds golfers gains experience during summer

by Burton Taylor
Copy Director

Rivals of the 'Hounds are awaited by Maryville High School's girls golf team as they prepare for the upcoming season.

Head Coach Pat Turner, said she is eager to watch the 'Hounds battle teams like Savannah.

"I think (the rivalry) started with the band and then moved to other sports like football," Turner said. "But it is a good natured rivalry."

Turner is confident the team will do well because it will have had time for 14 practices before its first match, against Tarkio Academy, at 4 p.m. Sept. 13, at Mozingo Golf Course.

Turner said the team is working to prepare for Tarkio, a 1997 state contender.

"They are ready for us and they have been out there practicing," Turner said.

The team is led by junior Megan McLaughlin.

Junior letterman Rachael Espey is returning for another year of competition, as are sophomores Jessica Spainhower and Jodi Throckmorton.

Turner said she is excited to see freshmen Erin McLaughlin and Natalie Billings join the 'Hounds' roster.

"We really have some potential and I'm really pretty happy with what has come out this year," Turner said.

With less team members than usual,

Turner said the girls will be able to benefit from more individual attention.

"You have more time to practice one-on-one, so there's going to be some advantages there," Turner said.

Another extra edge the 'Hounds have on other teams is the experience they gained over the summer, Turner said. The team went on a road trip to Arkansas to play a few rounds of golf over break.

The Spoofhound golfers are beginning to develop a family tree of golfers as well. Erin and Megan are both sisters and Natalie's brother Dan Billings plays golf for the school in the spring.

Turner said the team has a lot of promise and may stand out in the crowd next season.

Greek Rush

The bond that lasts a lifetime

Couple reminisces about being Greek at Northwest

by Heather Butler
Features Editor

While shoving her feet into her bobby socks and saddle shoes she quickly glanced into the mirror — it was Rush week...1945. She couldn't be late to the meeting that would affect her life forever.

There were only two sororities to choose from in 1945: Alpha Sigma Alpha or Sigma Sigma Sigma. The men only had two choices as well. They could choose from either Phi Sigma Epsilon or Sigma Tau Kappa.

June (Masters) Vest was determined to become an Alpha Sigma Alpha. She had talked to some of the upperclassmen who were members of Alpha Sigma Alpha and was sure it was the sorority she wanted to join. Rush week was approaching and she was ready.

Many of the same traditions are carried on from 53 years ago. In 1945, rushee's dressed in formal attire. They met with different sororities and talked with them to determine which organization they wanted to join.

Pledges attended parties hosted by the fraternities and sororities throughout rush week. Some of the parties had themes. June remembers going to a party with a western theme.

"We all dressed up in cowgirl garb and roasted hot dogs at one of the Alpha rush parties," June said. "We had a lot of fun at that party."

The girls wore pledge pins with ribbons to show which sorority they were pledging. Alpha's wore red and white ribbons and Tri-Sigma's wore royal purple and white.

Both the fraternities and sororities were silenced with their pledge pins because they were not allowed to speak with a Greek member until Bid Day. This is still a tradition carried on today.

"Hell Week" is also another tradition continued on by fraternities during rush week, but 53 years ago the girls also participated.

June remembers one of her sisters making her and another pledge go to a cemetery at midnight to find a gravestone that had a particular phrase on it.

Bill Vest, June's husband and 1946 Phi Sigma Epsilon president, recalled making a pledge get him a saddle horse and parade him around town on Saturday night, when everyone gathered at the town square.

"We would also blindfold the new pledges and take them a few miles out of town, drop them off, and make them find their way home," Bill said.

After all of the rush activities that week, bids went out and June had been accepted. She was officially an Alpha Sigma Alpha. With that new title came new friends and lots of fun said June.

The Alpha's that year were joined up with the Sig Tau Kappa's and the Sigma Sigma Sigma's were teamed with the Phi Sigma Epsilons.

Teaming sororities and fraternities is still a tradition that is used at Homecoming and mixers.

The groups had parties, dinners and dances financed by their dues, which were approximately $2 a month at the time.

"We would have five piece bands come to our formals that would cost up to $75," Bill said.

At the dances, patronesses, which were the towns more prominent women, would greet the Greeks at the door along with faculty sponsors.

The Greeks were provided with dance cards and had to stand with the patronesses and sponsors for at least one of the dances, so they would feel welcome at the festivities.

In 1945 sororities also participated in two groups called the "Beer 'Cats" and the "Green and White Peppers."

They would go to football games in their matching outfits and cheer on the Bearcats.

The "Beer 'Cat's" were predominantly Sigma Sigma Sigma's and the "Green and White Peppers" were mostly Alpha Sigma Alpha's.

The most frequented bar of the 1940's was the Palms.

The World Famous Outback had not yet earned its "world famous" title.

Greeks were forbidden to have alcoholic beverages at their parties.

"It just wasn't done back in those days," Bill said. "We would have been shunned by the administrators and faculty."

June did admit that college students in those days would go out to their cars and sneak a quick drink during dances or parties.

Residence halls had 10 p.m. curfews during the weekdays and 11 p.m. curfews on weekends.

"We had house mothers who would have to let us in when we missed curfew and report us to the dean of women," June said.

The two fraternity houses also had house mothers and were also provided with a food service.

The sorority sisters ate in the basement of Roberta Hall, which used to house a formal dining room.

"We would have to dress in our very best on Sundays for dinner if we were to dine in Roberta's dining room," June said. "We would stand in line and fill the dining area as we received our food."

June said that in the fall of 1945 the V-12 Navy program came to campus and took all but five men, including her husband.

"There were 1,200 students when I left Maryville for the war," Bill said. "When I came back there were only 300 left."

They felt a sense of belonging throughout their college years that would have been void without the friendships they made with other Greeks outside and within their own affiliation.

Why did or didn't you choose to affiliate yourself with a Greek organization?

"I considered it, but being a member of many organizations on campus, I didn't join. I feel that if you can't give 100 percent to an organization, you can't get 100 percent out of it. I was just too busy. However, just because you're independent doesn't mean you're anti-Greek." Angel Harris-Lewis

The Stroller

Your Man defends independents

The Stroller

Weekly Wanderer rushes to love pavilion

The start of a new school year. Everyone has so much energy and great plans for the year. Of course, the homework will take all the motivation right out of us. But we all still have room to party on the weekends. Or at least Your Man has time being an independent.

Something I have noticed lately is the hoorah preparations for Rush. Go ahead and rush, but the cool ones are the independents.

You don't need to be in a fraternity or sorority to have friends and a good time. Sure, if you want to purchase your friends for a few bucks that you can't really afford, then go right on ahead. Your Man has better things to do with his time and money.

Next on campus we have the Golden Pond Pavilion thing-a-ma-jig. Your Man is impressed with how fast the new water pavilion is being built. I guess University officials wanted the newest makeout spot completed as fast as possible.

Imagine a warm fall night with the bright moonlight glancing off the water lilies as your fourth date of the week melts into your arms and your lips embrace. The Love Pavilion, so exciting and new. Come aboard the Love Pavilion, we're expecting you.

Also, Your Man has noticed the freshmen are doing quite well. Just one thing — stop wearing those high school T-shirts. We all know you are freshmen; you don't have to announce it to us.

Your Man has found out the one way to still use those shirts is to wear them to bed or when you are lounging in your room. But not in public please.

Your Man thinks it is great the University is renovating the Union, but they might want to find another place for the location of the food choices. Personally, Your Man does not like eating and smelling formaldehyde. Sorry, they just do not mix.

Keeping the renovations in mind, someone at ARAMARK needs to invest in a dictionary. Hubbard's Cubbard is a cute name, but I thought this was an institution of higher learning, not a poetry corner.

Does anyone know where Your Man can get food around here? I'm still lost and I haven't eaten since Friday. I found Bytes in Garrett-Strong but I could not stand the funky smell that went along with it or the thought of eating where they've dissected pigs and other animals.

One last thing before I wrap it up. What is up with this convocation thing for freshmen? Rumor has it this convocation was set up for freshmen at the end of Advantage '98. At this freshman convocation students were asked to sign the proposed University covenant. To Your Man it sounds like the University is trying to form us into a cult. What will happen if the students refuse to sign the covenant? Will they be kicked out of the University? I thought we were a public school, not a cult group.

The dress for this years convocation was casual wear. Who knows, next year it might be the all-uniform-monk look. Heck, in years to come the top story on CNN could read: 6,000 students dead after mass suicide. Wouldn't that be wild? Who would be our leader? Hubbard? That might be rather difficult, since he's never been seen.

Oh, but wait. Your Man had a President Hubbard sighting on campus. Seems as though the prez himself made an appearance and gave a speech at the Freshman Convocation. Although rumor has it the Freshman Convocation speech was the same as the Faculty Convocation speech, Your Man applauds his appearance.

The Stroller has been a tradition at Northwest since 1918 and does not reflect the views of the Missourian.

Pavilion to be complete by Homecoming

by Joni Jones
Managing Editor

An attraction intended to unite the Northwest and Maryville communities is being added to campus.

The International Plaza, featuring the Boulevard of Nations, a water pavilion, the Friends Wall and World Clock are being constructed around Colden Pond.

The $400,000 project is being funded through donations.

Construction is scheduled to be finished by early October in time for Homecoming, said Jim Moore, director of development.

The International Plaza honors Northwest's multicultural population. The boulevard will run from College Avenue to the Student Union and be lined with flags from 48 countries. As the international population increases at Northwest, so will the number of flags, Moore said.

The water pavilion is an 800-square-foot, lighted facility which is intended to be used as a gathering place.

The pavilion is also a memorial to Karen Hawkins, a Northwest student murdered in 1995.

The landmark Kissing Bridge will also be incorporated into the pavilion.

The Friends of the Wall will display names of people who donate money to the project.

The World Clock, above the wall, will showcase clocks keeping the time of five different time zones, which have yet to be determined by the University.

Moore said this project is something everyone can enjoy and learn from.

"The lesson is we are not here alone," he said. "We live in a global society and we are all in it together."

Heat causes athletic rescheduling

by Mark Hornickel
Sports Editor

Last week, two high school athletes in Kansas collapsed and died following the first football practice of the season.

It was later determined the cause of the deaths was related to the heat wave that has recently struck the Midwest.

With several local sports teams beginning their practices, coaches and trainers are doing their best to take care of the athletes and help their bodies keep cool during the hottest parts of the day.

"Well, we all get cranky," Maryville head football coach Chuck Lliteras said. "We struggled through the second week, trying to keep them hydrated, so their performance levels would not go down."

The coaches have a rule that any time they notice a player who may need water, they allow him to have a drink.

"We let them have water pretty much any time they want," Lliteras said. "If they can leave a drill, get water and get back in the drill, we'll let them do that."

The players have scheduled water breaks, and Maryville High school volunteer trainer Brian Deardorff takes care of the players as well.

"On the real hot days, I have ice towels for them to flip over their heads," Deardorff said. "They can just soak and take their shoulder pads off for part of the practice."

The players have also been provided Gatorade during and after practices to keep from dehydrating.

This week at Maryville High School, in accordance with school policy, practices were postponed until 6 p.m. so the athletes could practice in conditions that were slightly cooler and safer for them.

Football wasn't the only sport to adjust schedules because of heat. Prior to this week, Maryville head cross country coach Ron Eckerson held his team's practices in the mornings. He said he makes sure that the runners' workouts include a place to stop for water.

"We're just making sure they can stop somewhere for water," Eckerson said. "Most of them have been running to the University so they can go into the Fine Arts Building or any of the other buildings on campus."

Deardorff said there have not been any substantial problems yet.

"It's about normal," he said. "You can tell the guys that didn't work as much over the summer. They're a little more out of shape."

If the athletes feel dizzy or start to get a headache, Deardorff and the coaches have instructed the players to let them know immediately.

"Depending on how dehydrated the players are, we'll have them get their pads off," Deardorff said. "The main thing is to get water into them and get all cooled off. If it gets any worse, ultimately, we'll get them to the hospital."

Democrat begins campaign

■ U.S. Representative helps Wheeler kick off state Senate campaign

by Toru Yamauchi

Senior Reporter

A local Democrat candidate running for state Senate kicked off her campaign with a congresswoman Wednesday.

Pat Danner, U.S. Representative, D-Mo., offered her support to Beth Wheeler, running for the 12th state Senate district, during an open house.

Danner, who is also up for re-election, was visiting Maryville for a town hall meeting.

Wheeler said her relationship with Danner should help her campaign against Republican incumbent Sam Graves.

"We have many of the same people whom we will be representing," Wheeler said. "I think it's another of those relationships that helps strengthen the influence and the power of northwest Missouri. We're very sparsely populated and those relationships and collaboration make us stronger."

Danner has known Wheeler for several years because she was a state Senator when Wheeler served as a state representative from 1987 to 1992.

"I was on the other side of Capitol, so I did not work closely or personally with Beth," Danner said. "But everything I ever heard about her is very, very positive, and I think she would make a fine public server."

Maryville Mayor Bridget Brown, candidate for State House of Representatives, also joined Wheeler at her campaign headquarters.

Brown, who is also challenging Republican incumbent Rex Barnett for the Nov. 3 election, said Wheeler is a beneficial running mate.

"It's kind of exciting to be able to work with one another," Brown said. "Beth has a long tenure as a representative, so she has certainly been a good adviser for me, so I can look to her for a lot of good information. She's been a big help for me. Hopefully I'm being a help to her, too."

Wheeler said she wants to make sure this district has a better education system, better economic development, better transportation and better safety.

"I believe it's something I can contribute to the people and to the district," Wheeler said.

"I believe that I am electable and will win because of the strong base of support that I have been building. I think that public service should have good people in it."

Wheeler resigned as vice president for community relations at Northwest in June. However, the decision was not one she had planned for a long time, she said.

Wheeler was asked to run for the Senate in 1994 and in March this year, but said she was not able to make a decision in both opportunities.

Incumbent Republican opens headquarters in Maryville to operate re-election campaign

by Scott Summers
Senior Reporter

State Senator Sam Graves was in Maryville Wednesday night to celebrate the opening of his campaign headquarters.

Graves said there were a number of reasons he decided to open his campaign headquarters in Maryville at 112 E. Third St.

"Maryville is the largest community in the district," Graves said. "I represented Maryville in the House and the last four years in the Senate. This is the last term I can serve in the Senate, so I thought this was a fitting place to be."

Jeff Roe, Graves' campaign manager, said Wednesday night's activities were important to the election bid.

"It shows people our presence in Nodaway County," Roe said. "Maryville is going to be the heart of our campaign. It's very important for the kickoff to gauge support and rally supporters."

Graves said one of his main goals, if he is elected to another term in fall, is to continue to fight for funding for education and roads in rural communities.

He said he has learned plenty from past campaigns that will help him this November.

"The important thing is to never take anything for granted," Graves said. "Pay attention to those people who have helped you out and supported you in the past and stand on your record."

Graves said he is very proud of the things he has accomplished in the past.

"I stand up for the individual," Graves said. "I'm not afraid to ruffle any feathers to get my point across."

Bob Rice, Northwest student and a member of Graves' campaign staff, said he has a lot of respect for what Graves does for the community.

"It takes a lot of hard work and guts," Rice said. "In my personal opinion, I don't want a yes man. I want somebody who will stand up to K.C. and St. Louis and say, 'We want our fair share.'"

My Turn

Missourian makes changes to inform, serve readers

Something is missing.

Every week the staff of the Northwest Missourian tries to provide you with the most up-to-date, comprehensive coverage of news and sports in the Maryville area.

But it often seems like something is lacking.

We have a tendency to forget our most important element — you.

A lot of the events you participate in haven't gotten much coverage.

A lot of the issues you are concerned about have gone by unnoticed.

So, we're doing something about it.

First, as a media outlet, the Missourian strives to report on the things you need to know about.

But without hearing from you, we don't know what those issues or events are.

So we are adding some new features to the Missourian.

We have always tried to keep the lines of communication between our readers and ourselves open; from letters to the editor and It's Your Turn to e-mail, phone calls and even faxes.

Our latest feature is Back Talk.

Next week we will have a direct line for our readers to leave their concerns and opinions anonymously.

You will also have access to Back Talk via our web site beginning next week.

Let us know if you have a complaint or compliment about Northwest or Maryville.

Your concerns will be printed in the newspaper and on the website. The Back Talk number is 562-1980, or access Back Talk on our website at <http://www.nwmissouri.edu/missourian>.

The online version of the Missourian is also changing. Starting Monday, we will have both daily and weekly versions online.

The Northwest Missourian Daily Online will briefly update news and sports stories Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday while Missourian Online will offer complete stories and additional features each Thursday and Friday.

Our third addition is an engagement, wedding and anniversary announcement page.

Send us your engagement, wedding and anniversary announcements and we will print them the first Thursday of each month.

Mail your announcements to The Northwest Missourian, 800 University Drive, Wells Hall 8, Maryville, Mo. 64468, or fax them to 562-1521.

We encourage you to take advantage of this special feature.

Although the Missourian is staffed by students who are also struggling with monster class loads, crammed schedules and a lack of time and money, we consider ourselves professionals.

As professionals, we are greatly concerned with our credibility.

The journalism profession has recently been faced with major setbacks regarding its ability to accurately and ethically report stories.

Locally, we have seen the effects in a column edited by Shane Whitaker at the Maryville Daily Forum last year.

Nationally, we can learn from the recent examples of The New Republic's former reporter Stephen Glass, who fabricated

everything from telephone numbers to sources in his stories; The Boston Globe's former columnist Patricia Smith, a Pulitzer finalist, who admitted to inventing sources and quotes; the Cincinnati Enquirer's stolen e-mails regarding Chiquita's business practices; and CNN and Time magazine's false report that the military had used nerve gas to kill American defectors in Laos during the Vietnam War.

We are working to ensure situations like these never happen at the Missourian.

We have taken steps to maintain our credibility, including the addition of a copy assistant to fact check our stories.

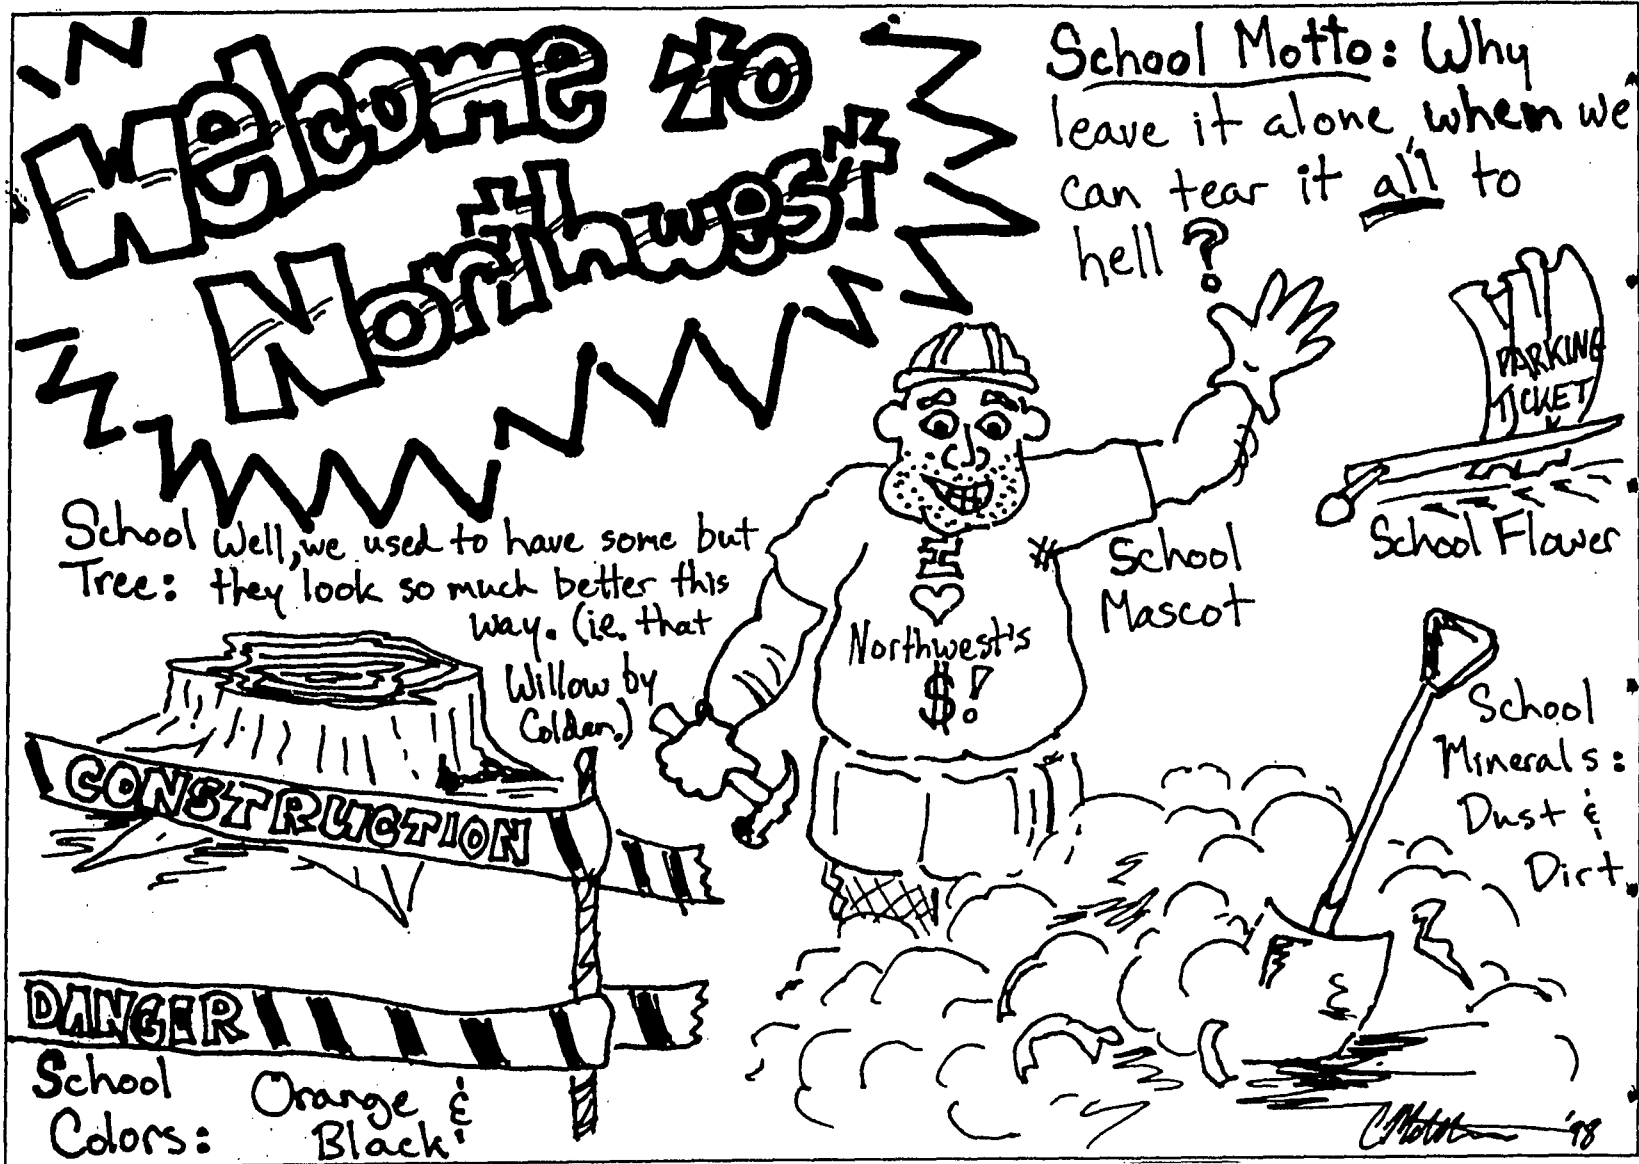

We always strive to remain unbiased in all stories and report fairly and accurately.

If there is anything I can do for you, please let me know. I am always willing to listen to readers' suggestions and concerns. I can be reached at 562-1224 Monday through Friday.

As the editor in chief of the Missourian, I look forward to working with you and reporting on the issues and events you are interested in.

Keeping Northwest on track

Will Rogers said it first. University President Dean Hubbard repeated it last week: "Even if you are on the right track, you'll get run over if you just sit there."

Northwest is constantly moving and seeking improvement. But how do we determine what the right track is?

We have outlined seven recommendations for the school year. By continuing our journey on the right track, we can reap many benefits.

1. Orange fences
We are all tired of seeing them, but we look forward to the end results. We challenge the University and construction crews to stick to their time tables for their remodeling projects.

We also need to look at the quality of the work being done. The Administration Building was finished just last year and problems are already beginning to surface.

The plastic covers on many of the stairs are beginning to pull up or slip.

The Financial Aid office on the remodeled second floor was forced to deal with falling ceiling tiles prior to Advantage '98. Heavy condensation from the air conditioning system loosened the tiles and sent them to the floor.

If Northwest is going to continue trying to make improvements to our buildings, then we must remember the old adage to do the job right the first time. We don't have the time or money to fix mistakes that never should have been made.

Residence halls can be included in this list, too. The halls are in need of improvements and should be placed on the same priority list as academic buildings. Although South Complex is being worked on now, North Complex, Hudson and Perrin halls and all four high rises are in need of repairs.

Franken Hall residents are complaining of crumbling walls. A water main broke on the top floor of Millikan Hall before Advantage '98, sending water through the elevator shafts. Phillips Hall, although it is supposed to be air-conditioned, is only partially cooled. The air conditioning system has been in place in Phillips since it was built, but has never worked correctly. Hudson and Perrin halls and North Complex only have air conditioning in their lounges.

Early this morning a Hudson Hall resident had to be rushed to the hospital, but the elevator wasn't even big enough for the stretcher without adjusting it to an upright position. All buildings should not only be handicap accessible, but accessible to emergency crews.

2. Student Senate
In her campaign for office last year, Student Senate President Angel McAdams said she wanted to increase communication with students. We encourage Senate to take a proactive approach to government, as opposed to the reactive approach it has been criticized for in the past.

But this is not a one way road. Students must be willing to work with Senate in return.

3. Administration
We want to encourage our administration to be more approachable as well. Sometimes we wonder if they really know what students need. They can do all the surveys they want, but do they understand the students? We want to be more than a statistic.

Administration should more visible and willing to sit down and talk with students at random. Remember, not all student concerns are voiced through Senate. Northwest is a very diverse campus. Take time to listen to student's views.

4. Security
The addition of security lights in our parking lots and along the sidewalks are a welcome addition, but more can be done.

Many area colleges and universities have emergency telephones throughout campus to ensure students' safety. While the Campus Safety escort service is a good idea, few take advantage of it.

Student and faculty safety should be a No. 1 priority. Emergency telephones will provide a way to assure everyone's well-being.

5. Academics
In an institution that prides itself on excellence, equal recognition is often scarce. Athletic teams are very important to the University, but we need to give equal time to academics.

When was the last time you heard President Hubbard boast about the forensics team? Or Northwest student's CPA exams?

6. Parking
Over the summer the University paved many of the cowpaths Hubbard complained about early last year.

Why can't we pave a parking lot, too? With so many residents living in Hudson, Perrin and Roberta halls, half of the commuter parking lot behind Valk has been designated as resident parking. Where are the commuters supposed to park now?

A large number of our commuters and residence do not have a place to park. It's past time to take action on the parking issue.

7. The students
Students take time to complain among themselves, but they don't take time to do something about it.

Students, if you want to accomplish anything, you must be willing to work with those in authority. Take time to talk to group leaders, administrators and the Missourian staff. These groups initiate change and provide a voice to address issues important to you.

We challenge the administration and students to consider these recommendations. The only thing that keeps us on the right track is listening to the most important people on campus — the students. This only happens if we take the time to not only hear, but listen to what is said.

Convocation new to campus

by Scott Summers
Senior Reporter

Northwest is trying to make the jump from high school to college easier for incoming freshmen.

With that in mind, the University's first student convocation took place Sunday.

Northwest President Dean Hubbard told freshmen the University's main focus is on quality, but it is up to the students to make a difference.

"It takes two hands to clap," Hubbard said. "And you have to clap along with us to make this work."

Kent Porterfield, vice president for Student Affairs, said the convocation should have shown students exactly what is needed to be successful in their college years.

"It's a nice way to kick off the year for new students," Porterfield said. "In particular, I think it helps to give them some sense of what's expected."

Angel McAdams, Student Senate president, focused her speech to freshmen on where some of Northwest's graduates are now.

She remembers what it was like to be a freshman.

"What really impressed me was how much pride and love this campus and community had," McAdams said.

The hour-long convocation offered freshmen students one final piece of motivation before they began the new year.

"I think it's fair to say that faculty and staff make a serious commitment to students, and we want students to make that same commitment," Porterfield said. "I think this is an opportunity for them to really see that it's a fun experience, but at the same time there is a little bit of work to be done."

McAdams said the program got the message across to new students.

She hopes the convocation will become a tradition at Northwest.

"I think it went very well," she said. "It was awesome. I wish we would have had something like this when I was a freshman."

Freshman Tony Saccoman, accounting major, said the presentation was very informative.

"I learned to stay away from the party scene," Saccoman said. "Go ahead and have fun, but remember why you're here."

Judge rules in harassment case

Simonson found guilty

by Jacob DiPietre
Special Assignment Reporter

Sexual harassment allegations, filed against Michael Simonson at Iowa State, were confirmed by an administrative law judge in late June.

Simonson was approved by the Northwest Board of Regents to be director of the Center for the Application of Instructional Technology to Learning in March. He withdrew from the position after the allegations were covered by the Missourian in April.

Judge Donald Bolhken found Simonson, a tenured professor of curriculum and instruction at Iowa State, had engaged in behavior that constituted quid pro quo sexual harassment, sexual abuse, creating a sexually hostile workplace and educational environment, and intentionally misrepresented himself to superiors.

Quid pro quo sexual harassment means Simonson offered to change a student's grade or help her out financially in exchange for sex.

CeCe Wagnor, Iowa State's attorney, said in the case of intentional misrepresentation, Simonson deliberately lied to his superiors at Iowa State in order to hinder the investigation.

"All of the violations of sexual harassment prohibitions, taken together, constitute proof...of a pattern of sexual harassment by Simonson," Bolhken wrote. "There are reasonable grounds to believe that the charges against Simonson are true and support the proposed action of terminating his employment."

Simonson and his attorney Stephen Terrill are appealing the decision, and did not return phone calls for comment.

However, soon after the judge gave his ruling, Simonson spoke out about his possible job at Northwest.

According to the July 2 issue of the Iowa State Daily, Simonson said he wants to stay at Iowa State and is "not interested in a job" at Northwest.

"I'm still working with them (Northwest) to find candidates for that job, but I'm not interested in the position and I never really was," Simonson was quoted as saying in the Daily.

Provost Tim Gilmour had no comment.

Timeline

- February 1998 - Northwest Board of Regents approved the appointment of Michael Simonson as CAITL director.
- April 1998 - Allegations of sexual harassment against Simonson at Iowa State University are uncovered by the Northwest Missourian. Simonson's appointment at Northwest is reversed.
- University President Dean Hubbard and Provost Tim Gilmour address questions about Simonson's hearing in the Missourian.
- May 1998 - Simonson withdraws from the CAITL position.
- June 1998 - Judge Donald Bolhken finds Simonson had engaged in behavior that constituted quid pro quo sexual harassment, sexual abuse, created a sexually hostile workplace and educational environment and intentionally misrepresenting himself to superiors.

CAITL undergoes setbacks, moves on

by Jacob DiPietre
Special Assignments Reporter

While the departure of Michael Simonson as CAITL director may have been a minor setback, the University is moving on.

Roger Von Holzen, interim CAITL director, said things are not moving as fast as he had hoped, but there is a plus side to the situation.

"One benefit of the delay is the fact that we've had more money made available for hardware and software," Von Holzen said. "I don't know what we would have done without it."

Taylor Barnes, dean of the College of Arts and Science, said the committee started a new search over the summer and received around 30 applications. He said they have the list narrowed down to 10 and are checking references.

While the University looks for a new director Von Holzen said he is happy he has the opportunity to work as CAITL director on an interim basis.

"It gives me a chance to find out if I want it before I have to take it," Von Holzen said. "It is a opportunity for me."

Clinton scandal hits home

■ Northwest students, faculty discuss actions, future of nation's leader

by Lindsey Corey
News Editor

It has been a colorful summer with the now infamous blue cocktail dress, $100 gold tie and, of course, the White House. And now, the threat of impeachment.

President Bill Clinton has been seen in a new light in recent months as the Monica Lewinsky case resulted in him becoming the first president to testify before a grand jury.

Northwest political science professors and students have closely monitored Clinton's actions up until his address to the nation last Monday when he confessed to having a relationship with Lewinsky that was "not appropriate," but not exactly sexual.

"I thought he was trying to simply say as little as was possibly necessary considering there were seven months of silence and then they had physical evidence," said Richard Fulton, political science professor.

Although an Aug. 31 Newsweek report said 57 percent of Americans believe Clinton said enough about his relations with Lewinsky in his speech, most department members

"Clinton is an intelligent man who behaved stupidly. Men have what I call the 'male disease.' They think they can have their cake and eat it too, but there is always a consequence. He hurt his family and the nation and diminished the integrity of the presidency."

David McLaughlin, associate professor of political science agreed with Fulton that the statement should have come prior to his testimony and that Clinton left basic information.

"He should have given it a lot sooner, because he seemed mad at the world and like he had to be there," Mindy White, political science major, said. "He never took blame and didn't seem sorry."

Fifty-nine percent of those interviewed in the Newsweek poll said Clinton should have used the words "I'm sorry."

Robert Dewhirst, political science professor, said he was surprised at how combative Clinton was toward Starr. He had expected him to be "more apologetic."

Angel Harris-Lewis, recent Northwest political science graduate, said the speech did little more than "signify that he wasn't honest initially" and that, she said, sets a bad example.

"You're taught to admit when you're wrong at an early age,"

Harris-Lewis said. "It sends a bad message for a leader of a nation to not take responsibility sooner."

Public opinion polls have consistently given Clinton high ratings. Despite problems in his personal life, he has experienced approval for many of his political moves and ideas.

"Clinton is an intelligent man who behaved stupidly," said David McLaughlin, associate professor of political science. "Men have what I call the 'male disease.' They think they can have their cake and eat it too, but there is always a consequence. He hurt his family and the nation and diminished the integrity of the presidency."

Pat Danner, U.S. Representative, D-Mo., said a prescription for the "disease" and its side effects will be difficult to fill.

"It's going to be impossible for the president to call members of Congress now and say you've got to do this for the presidency," Danner said. "When someone has told you something in January and then completely reverses what he said a few months later, it causes one to have some fear and questions about his truthfulness."

Others are foreseeing that Clinton will get little respect from colleagues and will face new challenges in getting things accomplished.

"He can't regroup," said Kevin Buterbaugh, political science professor. "He has lost the support of his party and Congress. Without that you can't be a successful president. As far as domestic issues, he's toast."

Many fear it could be worse. Clinton faces possible impeachment hearings if perjury is proven. Buterbaugh said although he is concerned with Clinton's ability to govern well, he would be "ashamed if he is impeached over an affair like this."

Fulton agreed impeachment is not likely in a situation of alleged adultery, but said "if he were an honorable man, he'd resign."

Dewhirst said impeachment is "always possible" since the Constitution is vague.

"It's all politics and there is no separation between private and political," he said. "The Republicans will do a cost-benefit analysis and base their decision on that."

President Bill Clinton addressed the nation after testifying before a grand jury last week in Monica Lewinsky case. Several Northwest students and professors felt Clinton should have apologized to the nation.

Summer Events

■ An overview of what happened in Maryville while you were gone

Memorial fund honors Northwest student

Christine A. Galitz, 22, Maryville, died June 9 in a car accident north of Maryville. She graduated from Northwest in May and was the editor in chief of Heartland View magazine.

Heartland View, a four-state travel and leisure magazine, was to discontinue publication due to lack of circulation and advertising to support its expenses. The magazine was to become an online publication.

According to the summer 1998 edition of Heartland View, Josten's Printing Company made it possible for the magazine to continue its printed version for another year.

A scholarship has also been started in Galitz's name and will be awarded for the first time during the spring semester. Donations can be sent to: Laura Widmer, 236 Wells Hall, Maryville, Mo. 64468.

Make checks payable to the Northwest Missouri Foundation and indicate in a memo the donation is for the Christine Galitz Memorial Scholarship.

Maryville accepting director applications

Matt Chesnut became Maryville's interim director of public works and assistant city manager after former director Ron Brohammer resigned earlier this month.

Chesnut was appointed to the temporary position by City Manager David Angerer. Brohammer left to work as city manager for Richmond.

Applications to fill the position are due Friday. A director will be selected after résumé reviews and interviews.

Chesnut, one of the applicants for the new position, will work as the interim director until director is appointed.

Construction complete, 102 bridge opened

The 102 bridge was opened to traffic just before July 4, and the $3.9 million project was officially completed Aug. 12. The job was completed on time, including the time it took to tear down the old bridge.

Several arrested on summer drug charges

According to Public Safety reports, the following arrests were made over the summer in which people were charged with possession of a controlled substance and/or possession of drug paraphernalia.

■ On July 27, Margaret L. Ebrecht, 24, Maryville, was issued a summons for possession of marijuana and drug paraphernalia.

■ On July 21, Jesse A. Baker, 21, Maryville, was arrested on charges of possession of drug paraphernalia and possession of 35 grams or less of marijuana.

■ On July 9, Daniel J.A. Hayward, 27, Rochelle, Ill., was arrested on charges of possession of drug paraphernalia and possession of 35 grams or less of marijuana.

■ On July 5, Russell L. Eich, 20, Maryville, was arrested for possession of marijuana and possession of drug paraphernalia.

■ On July 5, Michael S. Moss, Maryville, was arrested for possession of 35 grams or less of marijuana.

■ On June 27, Adam R. Chadwick, 18, Maryville, was arrested for possession of 35 grams of marijuana or less and possession of drug paraphernalia.

■ On June 27, Craig M. Durfey, 23, Maryville, was arrested on charges of possession of 35 grams of marijuana or less and possession of drug paraphernalia.

■ On June 27, Brian J. Stevens, 22, Maryville, was arrested on charges of possession of drug paraphernalia.

■ On June 8, Taffy J. Wilmes, 17, of Maryville, was issued summons for possession of marijuana.

Computer technology, home page enhanced

■ New server increases weekend access to net

by Toru Yamauchi
Senior Reporter

Several improvements were made to Northwest's computer system over the summer break.

Users now have more access hours to the World Wide Web because of the addition of a specialized server for allocating Internet protocol addresses to individual PCs, said Jon Rickman, director of computing services.

However, access to the VAX after 5 p.m. Friday until early Saturday morning will still be unavailable, Rickman said.

Another improvement involves the access speed to the Internet.

Two telephone lines were added, making access three times faster than before, he said. Students' usernames on the VAX were changed to comply with the future version of the computing system.

To help students adjust to the new system, academic computing services is offering short courses to assist them.

Northwest changed the structure and design of its home page as well last week, aiming at becoming more user-friendly.

This is the first change Dennis Esser, coordinator of publications, has made since he was hired nine months ago to improve the University web site.

He said there are visible design changes, but the most important change is in the organization of the home page and how to navigate users from one page to another.

Although the home page is far

Changes made to the electronic campus

- Access to the World Wide Web on Friday after 5 p.m. is available
- Access to World Wide Web is now three times faster
- VAX usernames and passwords changed
- To get your new username, log in with your old username and go to PC Password in your "STAR" account. Instruction to set a new password are available at <http://www.nwmissouri.edu/compserv/password.htm>.
- New computer labs were created in Garrett-Strong and the Fine Arts Building
- 107 new notebook computers were given to faculty
- Microsoft Access software is on the computers on the first floor of the library

from the perfect level, Esser is satisfied with the accomplishments, he said.

This is a part of ongoing improvement, he said. Although, the Northwest home page is almost entirely maintained by the Public Relations office, Esser wants to divide it into sections by department, because it is a time consuming job for the office, he said.

Northwest's web address is <http://www.nwmissouri.edu>.

Professor turns advertising into art

Art department plans to develop student-run advertising agency

by Toru Yamauchi
Senior Reporter

A newly hired art professor is not afraid to create an unprecedented study environment, along with a new computer lab in the Fine Arts Building.

Craig Warner, associate professor of art-graphic design, is planning to develop a student-run advertising agency.

The agency's members will be selected from students who have the best skills in areas necessary for the agency such as art, computers, graphic design, photography, writing and business, Warner said.

Examples of what the agency could do would make a logo for camping equipment, designing a box for soap and creating a home page for organizations such as the art department, he said.

Kim Spradling, art department chairman, said he agrees with Warner's idea of an ad agency because students can have "real life experience."

The agency would probably not receive any funding from the University, because it's going to be independent, Warner said.

Warner was the adviser of an 11-student advertising agency at Southwest Minnesota State. He said four members quit school and created an independent advertising agency.

"The president of the university was really upset with me, saying 'Those four students quit school, and you let them do it,'" Warner said. "(But) that's why you're here at school — to learn how to have an enjoyable career. That's what I did. I did my job."

Warner said he was pleased to come to Northwest because of the new computer lab used for graphic design and the art department's desire to move toward new media.

The newly established lab contains 17 personal computers aimed for artistic purposes primarily in five areas: type of graphic layout, drawing and illustration, image manipulation, interactive graphics like CDs and web pages, and motion, such as computer animation, Warner said.

By using these computers, a student will be able to complete graphic work that used to require several people and places, he said.

"This is something rather unique," Warner said. "It's an artistic endeavor using latest technology."

The new computer lab caused the closing of metalsmithing and jewelry classes and focuses on new media, Warner said.

Jennifer Meyer/Photography Director

Dr. Craig Warner works with one of the new computers that will soon be used by students who are interested in working for a student run advertising agency. Dr. Warner is looking for students with interest and experience in graphic design, photography, art, computers, writing and business.

Cabin Candles offers a variety of candles, incense and other items to help spruce up where ever you call home.

New candle business lights up community

by Stephanie Zellstra
Managing Editor

Candles used to be a necessity to see throughout the house. Now candles fill homes with scents of sugar and spice, sunset and melon.

Cabin Candles, which opened June 15, has had steady business since then. Owner Anne Snow attributes business to the growing popularity of candles.

"There used to be just a few fragrances available, but now there are so many seasonal candles," Snow said. "Candles are so popular because I think people are realizing that they can really finish a room off."

Although Snow has always liked candles and thought a candle store would do well, she said; her husband didn't agree.

"My husband was supportive of me, but didn't think there would be a market for a specialty store with candles," Snow said. "He has been really surprised with the amount of business I get. He just can't believe that women spend that much on candles."

Snow found out it hasn't been only women buying candles. She said men will come into the store and smell them right along with the women, because there is such a variety of fragrances available today.

Candles also make good gifts, as Snow has discovered. Many people will buy them for weddings, birthdays and other occasions.

Cabin Candles has a large selection of candles and other home decorating items, such as pictures, handmade pottery, odor eating candles and incense. Prices range from $1.20 votive candles to around $20 for pillar candles.

Snow has enjoyed the store so far, has been well received and is glad she made the decision to open the business.

Tips from Cabin Candles

- You don't save money by buying less expensive candles. They usually don't last as long and their fragrance isn't as strong.
- Always trim the wick before and after you burn the candle.
- Smell the bottom of the candle when you buy it to test how strong the fragrance is.

Communication remains fuzzy with cable company

by Scott Summers
Senior Reporter

Negotiations between the city of Maryville and Classic Cable might be moving to the next level.

Since January 1996, Maryville has been attempting to make a deal with Classic Cable to develop specifications for a new cable system.

City Manager David Angerer said negotiations have been conducted on an informal basis between the two sides, but no deal has been reached.

The city has decided to up the ante by going into formal negotiations as outlined by the Federal Communications Commission.

"Over the summer, they've gotten a little closer, but not close enough," Angerer said.

The city's ultimate goal of its negotiations with Classic Cable is to receive better pictures, better sound and more reliable system. The city also wants Classic

In a letter to Mayor Bridget Brown, dated Aug. 12, 1998, Classic Cable announced its basic service rates would increase by 50 cents per month starting in October. Currently cable costs $30.45 per month.

Cable to provide Internet service, data transmission, telephone and other services via customers' television sets.

Gil Nichols, vice president of operations for Classic Cable, views things a bit differently than Angerer.

"I think we're all pretty much on the same page," Nichols said. "The process is nearing completion."

Angerer said the city will continue to negotiate informally with Classic Cable, hoping the formal negotiations will make the company more flexible.

Angerer said two other results could come from the formal negotiation process.

"The FCC will help us get what we want from them, or as a possible result of the formal process, they would be ousted as the city's cable provider," Angerer said.

Nichols said Classic Cable has offered the city quite a bit already.

"We've offered to upgrade to a state-of-the-art system with the capabilities of 78 channels," Nichols said.

Angerer said the company understands what it is doing and knows what the city wants, but is playing games with Maryville.

"The problem that I have with Classic is that they can talk a pretty good story, but their formal proposal to us lacks detail," Angerer said.

Angerer said he thought the two sides had reached an agreement earlier this summer, but was disappointed when Classic Cable's contract to them was not specific enough.

Streets undergo major improvements

by Scott Summers
Senior Reporter

Both Northwest students and Maryville residents should have a smoother ride, thanks to recent street improvements.

Matt Chesnut, interim director of public works and assistant city manager, said all of the street projects are either finished or near completion.

One of the city's main goals this summer was getting its asphalt overlay projects done.

The largest of the asphalt overlay projects was on Walnut Street. Prather Avenue, Sunset Drive, East Jenkins Street and the intersection of Lincoln and Main streets also received attention from the Maryville Public Works Department. The contract price of the asphalt overlay project was $139,129.

Street Superintendent Jay Cacek said he has been relatively pleased with the work and the speed with which the projects are being completed.

Construction of concrete gutters and curbs on East Thompson Street are part of Maryville's permanent street project. The contract price of the project is $517,508.

Rain over the summer months has delayed work on North College Drive, which is supposed to cost the city $183,057, Chesnut said.

The project to completely replace the roadway was to take between six and eight weeks to complete, but is currently in its 12th week. Although the road is now open, there is still some minor work to be done.

"We're trying to beat the rate of the college students coming in," Cacek said. "If the weather would have been OK, we would have been done and out of there."

Cacek said the street department has been very busy trying to finish some of the larger projects, and now needs to take care of the little things.

"We want to get back to maintenance a little bit," Cacek said. "We kind of left that to get the bigger projects done, and we need to start patching some holes we have around town and doing some ditch-work."

The system is designed to prevent unwanted minerals from surfacing to groundlevel. It will also separate them from the groundwater.

The issue was voted on and passed at the Maryville City Council meeting Monday.

City Manager David Angerer said the installation of the system will prolong the life of the landfill by five years or more.

'Cats set sights high

■ Team hopes to beat Pittsburg State, rule MIAA

by Colin McDonough
Contributing Writer

Florence or Bust.
That's what the T-shirts say and anything less will be deemed a failure to the Bearcat football team.

Four seasons ago, the Bearcats were relegated to the basement of the MIAA, but they now sit atop the league reigning as kings. However, some team members think they are not receiving the royal treatment from other league coaches.

The preseason coaches' poll lists the 'Cats in the second position behind perennial power Pittsburg State, but many of the players said it is actually a blessing in disguise.

"I didn't think we had anything left to prove, but somebody's not giving us respect," said Adam Horn, junior defensive end. "It's definitely a motivating factor."

Steve Coppinger, senior center and one of four team captains, said it gives the Bearcats a chance to prove everybody wrong again.

"It's the way we want it," Coppinger said. "You see that and you think that people don't think we've proven ourselves. It gives us motivation because if they downgrade you then you show them where we are supposed to be."

Head coach Mel Tjeerdsma said the offense will be led by Harlon Hill, the award given to the best Division II football player, and all-America candidate senior quarterback Chris Greisen.

Greisen passed for over 2,400 yards and 23 touchdowns last season, while only throwing 7 interceptions.

Greisen said he will not get caught up in the Harlon Hill hype because there are other promising players on the team.

"Don't get me wrong, it would be a great honor, but as is any award, it's a team award and you can't earn it without a great supporting cast," Greisen said.

While statistics show Greisen leads the offense and lights up the scoreboard, the defense would like to keep the opponents' scoring lights dim.

"We want to pitch some shutouts this season," said Aaron Becker, junior defensive tackle. "Our offense is going to put some points on the board and we haven't had a shutout in my two years here, so it's about time that we have a shutout. Our front seven is as good as it has been in the past few years and our secondary is going to be tough to pass on."

Coach Mel Tjeerdsma and the Bearcats will take the field for the first home game of the 1998 football season Sept. 5 when they welcome Midwest Texas State. The 'Cats were 12-1 on the season last year and are looking for another shot at the national title.

Club draws talent, returns core of team

by Matt Gorgen
Staff Writer

The Northwest women's soccer club is back for another season after finishing with a winning record of 4-3-1 last year.

Head coach Greg Roper said he has high expectations for this year's team. Ten players are returning and 10 others are joining the team.

"Not only do we return with the core from last year's team intact, we've added a significant crop of players, both incoming freshman and on-campus talent, who heard about the program, got excited, and want to be a part of it," Roper said.

The returning striker is senior Andrea Sacco; returning midfielders are sophomore Melissa Cole and seniors Natalie Shepard, Kelli Coffee and Jerusha Sluss; returning defenders are seniors Katie

Adams and Monica Kepler; the returning goalkeeper is senior Danielle Saunders.

Midfielder Simon will add strength to the team, while Hayes and Smith will challenge for a starting position Roper said.

Boswell may give Saunders a run at goalkeeper along with Leach, Roper said. Roper said he looks forward to battling clubs from Kansas University and Kansas State.

The club will begin its season Aug. 29 at 1 p.m. against St. Mary's College of Leavenworth, Kan.

Roper is excited about the season and believes the program is headed in the right direction.

"The east bank is a great shaded place to watch a sports event," Roper said. "We're hoping new freshmen and returning students will want to come out and support Northwest's newest sport."

Squad looks to improve showing

The Bearcat volleyball team hopes to improve on last year's 8th place finish according to head coach Sarah Pelster.

■ Tournaments, regional action start season off right

by Colin McDonough
Contributing Writer

After posting a winning record last year, the Bearcat volleyball team is looking for an improvement in its MIAA showing, according to head coach Sarah Pelster.

Even with a 21-18 mark, last year's record was overshadowed by a 3-13 league mark, which earned an 8th place team finish. However, this year looks to be different Pelster said.

"We're going to improve on that because of the experience we gained last year from playing five freshmen," Pelster said. "With the game experience along with the offseason workouts we're going to be a viable contender."

Pelster said the team's attack will be led by a young crew of athletes. Without a senior on the squad the Bearcats will look to underclassmen to take charge, she said.

"With last year and this year I think we've had the best recruiting classes I've ever had," Pelster said. "Our future is bright and it's only going to get better in the next two to three years."

Sophomore middle hitter Abby Sunderman is a part of the young nucleus and led the 'Cats last year in hitting and was second in blocking, Pelster said.

Sunderman said even with the young roster, this year should be exciting.

"We're going to do a lot better because we are used to playing together now," Sunderman said. "We know what to look for in each other on the court. Hopefully we can build from that and make it a better season."

The Bearcats open their season Sept. 4-5 at the University of Alabama-Huntsville Tournament. Pelster said the team can't wait to get going.

"We are very excited to go down there and get the season started," Pelster said.

"We've found it to be a real good tournament and it's a regional tournament. So we get to play some regional teams to strengthen our schedule."

The MIAA shapes up to be a race to catch Central Missouri Jennies. Central has won all 16 league titles and has never lost more than two matches in a season since the inception of volleyball in 1982.

"(Central) has got a mental edge and for someone to beat them you've got to overcome that mental aspect," Pelster said.

Pelster also said Emporia State and Missouri Western should give the Jennies a run for their money in league play, but Central is the class of the MIAA.

Young team hopes for another championship

by Wendy Broker
Staff Writer

After standing atop the mountain of the MIAA conference and edging toward the peak nationally, the Northwest cross country teams will try to keep the tradition of recent years alive.

The women's team has won the MIAA championship for the last three years.

Team captain Lindsey Borgstadt, along with fellow senior Amber Martin, will offer leadership and experience to the team, which is looking to live up to it's No. 1 pre-season ranking, head coach Vicki Wooton said.

"It puts pressure on the team," Borgstadt said. "When you're on top it's hard to stay there — everyone's looking to knock you down. But if we work hard, we can win again. It'll be tough, but we have a lot of talent and I know we can do it."

Despite the relatively young roster, Wooton said goals for the team remain high.

"Ultimately, we want to win conference, place in the top two at regionals, be in the top three at all meets and have everyone finish the season healthy," Wooton said.

"We need to have some individuals step up and take the place of those that are gone. Although we are young and new, we have the capability if we work hard as a team."

Wooton said the women are looking good in practice and are looking ahead to their first meet, the Bearcat Distance Classic on Sept. 5 at Northwest.

The men's team will be striving to better last year's second place conference finish, head coach Rich Alsup said.

The men have been on the road to improvement in recent seasons, which will remain a priority, Alsup said.

"We're going to try to start out tougher than last year and hold it throughout the season, and try to make a run at Central (Missouri State)," Alsup said. "It's time for us to go for it. I think we have the start of a good season, and we're excited to get going."

The team, ranked No. 2 in the preseason poll, will be led by seniors Robby Lane, Brian Cornelius, and Don Ferree. All three have been major players in the team's success.

The men are putting in about 60 miles a week to prepare for the Bearcat Classic.

Coach moved out of intensive care

by Mark Hornickel
Sports Editor

Northwest's men's and women's head tennis coach Mark Rosewell underwent successful open-heart surgery last Thursday.

Rosewell suffered a minor heart attack on Aug. 17 while in Kansas City. He was admitted to North Kansas City Hospital, where he underwent testing and later a quintuple bypass operation.

The surgery was successful, Rosewell said. He was moved out of intensive care last Friday.

"Things seem to have gone OK," Rosewell said from his room at the hospital. "I'd just like to thank everyone for their prayers, thoughts, cards and things. I'm looking forward to getting back to Northwest and winning another championship."

Northwest Athletic Director James Redd said the entire Maryville community, faculty and staff at Northwest and many of Rosewell's friends shared concern for the Bearcat coach.

"We're really happy to hear that Mark is doing better," Redd said. "Mark is a big part of our athletics department and our community and we look forward to having him back just as soon as he is able."

Rosewell will have to go through rehabilitation, before he can return to coaching. Until then, graduate assistant Brian Surface will be heading the tennis team. Several other graduate assistants and former players will help out as well.

Rosewell was the 1998 Regional Women's Coach of the Year. He swept the MIAA men's and women's coach of the year honors in 1997.

Alumnus ends stint with Chiefs after being cut

by Mark Hornickel
Sports Editor

A former Bearcat's NFL hopes were cut short Tuesday.

Jesse Haynes, former Northwest running back, was one of 22 players cut from the Kansas City Chiefs roster in order to get it down to the NFL-mandated limit of 60.

Haynes spent last season with the Chiefs practice squad and gained a great deal of publicity as an up-and-coming running back during the offseason.

Haynes gained just 26 yards on 11 carries and never made it to the endzone. The number that stands out on his stat sheet is three fumbles.

Haynes former coach and current Northwest head football coach Mel Tjeerdsma said Haynes has the ability to do well, but the fumbles were costly.

"His effort probably just wasn't enough," Tjeerdsma said. "I think he was probably trying too hard and that maybe caused him to fumble the ball. He showed the same running abilities he had when he was here. It's just too much when you fumble the ball like he did."

As a senior at Northwest, Haynes dominated the Bearcats running game, helping the team to a record of 11-2 and the second round of the NCAA Division

II playoffs during the 1996 season. He set school records with 1,830 yards rushing and 20 touchdowns in a season.

Tjeerdsma said he had not spoken to Haynes, but he would advise him to try and continue his football career.

"I don't think he's ready to give up," Tjeerdsma said. "Hopefully he'll try to get on with another team or the practice squad for another year. I'd certainly encourage him to do that. It's probably not been a good experience for him, but hopefully he'll just go out and try to do what he does naturally."

Haynes was not available for comment.

'Hounds football team hopes to avenge title

by Mark Hornickel
Sports Editor

The Spoofhounds football team has begun its road to avenging an early exit from the play-offs last year.

"We've got a very close football team," head coach Chuck Lliteras said. "As always, our expectations are very high. This team wants to be successful. They want to win conference, win district and have a good shot at winning the 3A state championship."

Despite the loss of some key players from last year's roster, the 'Hounds will benefit from several returning players with varsity experience, including seniors Adam Otte, John Edmonds, Mike Nanniga and Chris Shieber, Lliteras said.

All together, the 'Hounds are built around a nucleus of 12 seniors.

Senior Nick Glassnap and junior Pat Jordan are the top two candidates for the quarterback position.

"Both are outstanding students and have good athleticism," Lliteras said.

Lliteras is also confident that new members like junior Justin DeShon, senior Adam Jones, junior Heath Reynolds and senior Joshua O'Donnell will be an asset to the 'Hounds this season.

"It's been our good fortune through the years to have a good feeder program," Lliteras said. "The kids grow and develop through the system starting in seventh grade. By the time they get to be juniors and seniors, they're developed and ready to play."

The 'Hounds will be playing in an expanded version of the Midland Empire Conference this year with the additions of Platte County, Cameron and Smithville.

"All have the ability to be very difficult opponents," Lliteras said. "One of the things year in and year out in the Midland Empire Conference is the quality of football we play. So it's going to be a really tough schedule this year."

Lliteras said the number one thing on the 'Hounds' mind going into the new season is to gain control of the ball and reduce the number of times it is on the ground.

"We'll still have a very explosive offense and a very explosive defense," Lliteras said.

Lliteras said it is critical that the younger players mature quickly in order to add depth to the team and help avoid injuries.

"Expectations are way up," Lliteras said. "And if they weren't I'd be very disappointed."

Fighting for the starting position, 'Hound quarterback senior Nick Glasnapp, spots a receiver over the middle of the field in Saturday's scrimmage. The 'Hounds will open their season at 7 p.m. Sept. 4 at Smithville. The team is beginning its quest for a chance at the state 3A title after being knocked out of contention by Platte County last November.

Cross country looks toward season

■ Boys, girls have high expectations for season, look to overcome losses

by Mark Hornickel
Sports Editor

The Maryville harriers are running with high expectations as they begin a new season, according to the team's head coach.

"I think we have a good possibility for a couple of guys and a couple of girls to qualify for state," head coach Ron Eckerson said.

Last year, graduate Courtney Conley was the 'Hounds' lone representative at the state competition.

Graduate Brian Jewell just missed a chance at running in the state meet.

Eckerson believes the team will overcome the losses of Conley and Jewell.

A newcomer to the team, junior Melissa Myers, could make a big impact on the team, Eckerson said.

Myers decided to give cross country a try after playing volleyball for the past two years. She runs track during the spring sports season.

Making a run again for the state meet will be senior Jason Felton.

Felton almost missed the state meet last year, finishing at districts with a time of 19:20.

Eckerson believes two sophomores, Jennifer Heller and Justin Nickerson, have a good shot at competing at the state level.

The 'Hounds will gain a wealth of leadership from the team's returning seniors — Laura Loch, Dustin Coulter, Nate Harris and Felton, Eckerson said.

Two freshmen, Ryan Douglas and Malorie Jones, also will be key additions to the squad, Eckerson said.

Netters increase in size, leaders

■ Maryville girls tennis welcomes new members, looks to improve record

by Blake Drehle
Missourian Staff

The Spoofhound girls' tennis team is set to begin another season. Twenty five girls make up this year's team, which is looking to improve.

After finishing with a 5-4 record last year, head coach P.K. Krokstrom said he is ready to start the season.

"There are several standout players on this year's team that are looking to have a good year," Krokstrom said. "This should be a real good team."

The addition several freshmen who are ready to learn also helps out the teams chances, Krokstrom said.

Krokstrom enjoys the fact that there are a lot of players out and wants everybody to have fun.

"My philosophy is that everybody plays and tries to have fun," he said. "With that attitude the team should do fine."

The toughest competition on the schedule will come from Savannah and Chillicothe. Those two teams are always tough and are strong in straights and doubles, Krokstrom said.

The 'Hounds' season begins at 4 p.m. Sept. 3, at home against Lafayette. Savannah will come to town Sept. 8. The 'Hounds will face Chillicothe Sept. 29.

The Maryville High School girls tennis team will return to the courts hoping to improve upon last years record beginning with their match against Lafayette Sept. 3.

'Hounds golfers gains experience during summer

by Burton Taylor
Copy Director

Rivals of the 'Hounds are awaited by Maryville High School's girls golf team as they prepare for the upcoming season.

Head Coach Pat Turner, said she is eager to watch the 'Hounds battle teams like Savannah.

"I think (the rivalry) started with the band and then moved to other sports like football," Turner said. "But it is a good natured rivalry."

Turner is confident the team will do well because it will have had time for 14 practices before its first match, against Tarkio Academy, at 4 p.m. Sept. 13, at Mozingo Golf Course.

Turner said the team is working to prepare for Tarkio, a 1997 state contender.

"They are ready for us and they have been out there practicing," Turner said.

The team is led by junior Megan McLaughlin.

Junior letterman Rachael Espey is returning for another year of competition, as are sophomores Jessica Spainhower and Jodi Throckmorton.

Turner said she is excited to see freshmen Erin McLaughlin and Natalie Billings join the 'Hounds' roster.

"We really have some potential and I'm really pretty happy with what has come out this year," Turner said.

With less team members than usual,

Turner said the girls will be able to benefit from more individual attention.

"You have more time to practice one-on-one, so there's going to be some advantages there," Turner said.

Another extra edge the 'Hounds have on other teams is the experience they gained over the summer, Turner said. The team went on a road trip to Arkansas to play a few rounds of golf over break.

The Spoofhound golfers are beginning to develop a family tree of golfers as well. Erin and Megan are both sisters and Natalie's brother Dan Billings plays golf for the school in the spring.

Turner said the team has a lot of promise and may stand out in the crowd next season.

The Spoofhound volleyball team will take the court for its first match Sept. 1 at Rock Port with hopes of regaining another Midland Empire conference championship.

Past provides solid base for MHS spikers

by Travis Dimmitt
Missourian staff

The Maryville volleyball team is approaching the season with much to build on from last year's successful campaign.

The 1997 Spoofhounds finished the season with a 24-4-1 record, which earned them a share of the Midland Empire Conference championship.

Head coach Greg Winslow expects to build on that success, but said his team will still need to work hard to improve.

"I expect us to be pretty good," Winslow said. "We have a lot of talent. A lot of junior varsity players moved up this year, but we are fairly young. It concerns me a little bit."

Another concern for Winslow is the loss of the two cornerstones of his 1997 squad, Abby Lane and Cynthia Prokes. Both graduated in May. Winslow expects veterans to step up and fill the void.

Seniors Stephanie Duncan and Kari Lohaefer will likely inherit key leadership roles for the 'Hounds, Winslow said.

Contributions may come from the younger players as well, he said.

"I do have some sophomores that may be able to step up to the varsity level and help a little bit," Winslow said. "Dana Lade made great strides last summer. Nicole Scieffer will probably step in as a middle blocker, middlehitter or possibly an outside hitter. She's got some size and pretty good skills."

Winslow has confidence the 'Hounds will start the year out right and possibly be a leg up in seasons to come.

"I'm excited about the season, not only this year, but for the possibility of the next two or three years," Winslow said. "We've got a lot of good athletes out there."

Greek Rush

The bond that lasts a lifetime

Couple reminisces about being Greek at Northwest

by Heather Butler
Features Editor

While shoving her feet into her bobby socks and saddle shoes she quickly glanced into the mirror — it was Rush week...1945. She couldn't be late to the meeting that would affect her life forever.

There were only two sororities to choose from in 1945: Alpha Sigma Alpha or Sigma Sigma Sigma. The men only had two choices as well. They could choose from either Phi Sigma Epsilon or Sigma Tau Kappa.

June (Masters) Vest was determined to become an Alpha Sigma Alpha. She had talked to some of the upperclassmen who were members of Alpha Sigma Alpha and was sure it was the sorority she wanted to join. Rush week was approaching and she was ready.

Many of the same traditions are carried on from 53 years ago. In 1945, rushees dressed in formal attire. They met with different sororities and talked with them to determine which organization they wanted to join.

Pledges attended parties hosted by the fraternities and sororities throughout rush week. Some of the parties had themes. June remembers going to a party with a western theme.

"We all dressed up in cowgirl garb and roasted hot dogs at one of the Alpha rush parties," June said. "We had a lot of fun at that party."

The girls wore pledge pins with ribbons to show which sorority they were pledging. Alpha's wore red and white ribbons and Tri-Sigma's wore royal purple and white.

Both the fraternities and sororities were silenced with their pledge pins because they were not allowed to speak with a Greek member until Bid Day. This is still a tradition carried on today.

"Hell Week" is also another tradition continued on by fraternities during rush week, but 53 years ago the girls also participated.

June remembers one of her sisters making her and another pledge go to a cemetery at midnight to find a gravestone that had a particular phrase on it.

Bill Vest, June's husband and 1946 Phi Sigma Epsilon president, recalled making a pledge get him a saddle horse and parade him around town on Saturday night, when everyone gathered at the town square.

"We would also blindfold the new pledges and take them a few miles out of town, drop them off, and make them find their way home," Bill said.

After all of the rush activities that week, bids went out and June had been accepted. She was officially an Alpha Sigma Alpha. With that new title came new friends and lots of fun said June.

The Alpha's that year were joined up with the Sig Tau Kappa's and the Sigma Sigma Sigma's were teamed with the Phi Sigma Epsilons.

Teaming sororities and fraternities is still a tradition that is used at Homecoming and mixers.

The groups had parties, dinners and dances financed by their dues, which were approximately $2 a month at the time.

"We would have five piece bands come to our formals that would cost up to $75," Bill said.

At the dances, patronesses, which were the towns more prominent women, would greet the Greeks at the door along with faculty sponsors.

The Greeks were provided with dance cards and had to stand with the patronesses and sponsors for at least one of the dances, so they would feel welcome at the festivities.

In 1945 sororities also participated in two groups called the "Beer 'Cats" and the "Green and White Peppers."

They would go to football games in their matching outfits and cheer on the Bearcats.

The "Beer 'Cat's" were predominantly Sigma Sigma Sigma's and the "Green and White Peppers" were mostly Alpha Sigma Alpha's.

The most frequented bar of the 1940's was the Palms.

The World Famous Outback had not yet earned its "world famous" title.

Greeks were forbidden to have alcoholic beverages at their parties.

"It just wasn't done back in those days," Bill said. "We would have been shunned by the administrators and faculty."

June did admit that college students in those days would go out to their cars and sneak a quick drink during dances or parties.

Residence halls had 10 p.m. curfews during the weekdays and 11 p.m. curfews on weekends.

"We had house mothers who would have to let us in when we missed curfew and report us to the dean of women," June said.

The two fraternity houses also had house mothers and were also provided with a food service.

The sorority sisters ate in the basement of Roberta Hall, which used to house a formal dining room.

"We would have to dress in our very best on Sundays for dinner if we were to dine in Roberta's dining room," June said. "We would stand in line and fill the dining area as we received our food."

June said that in the fall of 1945 the V-12 Navy program came to campus and took all but five men, including her husband.

"There were 1,200 students when I left Maryville for the war," Bill said. "When I came back there were only 300 left."

They felt a sense of belonging throughout their college years that would have been void without the friendships they made with other Greeks outside and within their own affiliation.

Why did or didn't you choose to affiliate yourself with a Greek organization?

"I considered it, but being a member of many organizations on campus, I didn't join. I feel that if you can't give 100 percent to an organization, you can't get 100 percent out of it. I was just too busy. However, just because you're independent doesn't mean you're anti-Greek."

The Stroller

Your Man defends independents

The Stroller

Weekly Wanderer rushes to love pavilion

The start of a new school year. Everyone has so much energy and great plans for the year. Of course, the homework will take all the motivation right out of us. But we all still have room to party on the weekends. Or at least Your Man has time being an independent.

Something I have noticed lately is the hoorah preparations for Rush. Go ahead and rush, but the cool ones are the independents.

You don't need to be in a fraternity or sorority to have friends and a good time. Sure, if you want to purchase your friends for a few bucks that you can't really afford, then go right on ahead. Your Man has better things to do with his time and money.

Next on campus we have the Colden Pond Pavilion thing-a-ma-jig. Your Man is impressed with how fast the new water pavilion is being built. I guess University officials wanted the newest makeover spot completed as fast as possible.

Imagine a warm fall night with the bright moonlight glancing off the water lilies as your fourth date of the week melts into your arms and your lips embrace. The Love Pavilion, so exciting and new. Come aboard the Love Pavilion, we're expecting you.

Also, Your Man has noticed the freshmen are doing quite well. Just one thing — stop wearing those high school T-shirts. We all know you are freshmen; you don't have to announce it to us.

Your Man has found out the one way to still use those shirts is to wear them to bed or when you are lounging in your room. But not in public please.

Your Man thinks it is great the University is renovating the Union, but they might want to find another place for the location of the food choices. Personally, Your Man does not like eating and smelling formaldehyde. Sorry, they just do not mix.

Keeping the renovations in mind, someone at ARAMARK needs to invest in a dictionary. Hubbard's Cubbard is a cute name, but I thought this was an institution of higher learning, not a poetry corner.

Does anyone know where Your Man can get food around here? I'm still lost and I haven't eaten since Friday. I found Bytes in Garrett-Strong but I could not stand the funky smell that went along with it or the thought of eating where they've dissected pigs and other animals.

One last thing before I wrap it up. What is up with this convocation thing for freshmen? Rumor has it this convocation was set up for freshmen at the end of Advantage '98. At this freshman convocation students were asked to sign the proposed University covenant. To Your Man it sounds like the University is trying to form us into a cult. What will happen if the students refuse to sign the covenant? Will they be kicked out of the University? I thought we were a public school, not a cult group.

The dress for this year's convocation was casual wear. Who knows, next year it might be the all-uniform-monk look. Heck, in years to come the top story on CNN could read: 6,000 students dead after mass suicide. Wouldn't that be wild? Who would be our leader? Hubbard? That might be rather difficult, since he's never been seen.

Oh, but wait. Your Man had a President Hubbard sighting on campus. Seems as though the prez himself made an appearance and gave a speech at the Freshman Convocation. Although rumor has it the Freshman Convocation speech was the same as the Faculty Convocation speech, Your Man applauds his appearance.

The Stroller has been a tradition at Northwest since 1918 and does not reflect the views of the Missourian.
